The Garden Bug

Your front door

Plants and garden decor can play a very important part in updating the entryway to your home, and in welcoming your guests. Keep healthy, in-season plantings as part of a balanced display with your front door, choosing them to accent (but not overpower) the door, trim, architectural details and the walkway. Planning Board OKs Two Projects include 74 studio units, 135 one-bedroom units of different sizes and 16 two-bedroom units, project architect David Snell told the Planning Board in March. The building will also include 12,330 square feet of ground-floor retail space.

A garage located on the ground floor of the building will house 65 parking spaces. LBC Boston can also lease up to 150 spaces within the nearby municipal parking garage for the new building and two others nearby - Nova Quincy at 1500 Hancock St., completed in 2019, and a proposed building at the corner of Revere Road and the Dennis Ryan Parkway, a parcel of land known as R2.

A 2020 land disposition agreement between LBC and the city, negotiated by Mayor Thomas Koch and approved by the City Council, allowed the developer to purchase the R2 and R3 parcels for a combined $4.8 million.

LBC Boston will have to go before the Affordable Housing Trust Committee to determine how the project will comply with the city's inclusionary zoning ordinance.

The second project approved by the Planning on June 8 was Tom Fitzgerald and Sean Whalen's proposal to construct a building with 44 condominium units, each containing two bedrooms, plus 73 parking spaces at 17 Bennett Lane near the Braintree town line. The site contains 28,483 square feet of land in an Industrial A zoning district.

Patrick Foley, the applicants' attorney, noted the building would be 300 yards away from the Quincy Adams MBTA station.

"These condo units will be marketed towards individuals who want to own a home who would like to have the convenience of living near the train station," he said.

The project requires approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals; the ZBA previously granted a usage variance for the building. The applicants also need to go before the Affordable Housing Trust Committee.

Given the site's proximity to Red Line and Old Colony Line tracks, the developers must also get clearance from the MBTA and/or Massachusetts Department of Transportation before receiving a demolition or foundation permit from the city.

In other business on June 8, the Planning Board opened a public hearing on Donato Frattaroli's proposal to alter the building at 332 Victory Rd. in Marina Bay, home to the Victory Point restaurant, to add four residential condominium units. The site is zoned Business C.

Frattaroli's attorney, Edward Fleming, said the three-story building presently houses the restaurant on the first floor, a function room and offices on the second floor, and a dentist's office on part of the third floor. Frattaroli is seeking permission to convert a vacant portion of the third floor into a condo unit and add a fourth floor to the building with three condos.

Fleming said Frattaroli has an easement for 50 parking spaces within Marina Bay, including seven on Victory Road in front of the building. Six of those spaces in front of the building would be reserved for residents of the proposed condos, Fleming said; the city's zoning code requires 1.5 parking spaces per residential unit in a Business C district.

Gregory Galvin, the board's vice chairperson, said he would like a written acknowledgment from the operator of Marina Bay that those spaces could be used for residences within the building. Fleming said he would provide that to the board.

The hearing on the matter was continued to Aug. 3.

In additional business on June 8, the board continued the public hearing on a proposed three-story, eight-unit residential building at 201 Copeland St. to Aug. 3. Kathleen Heyer, the proponent's attorney, said revisions to the initial proposal could not be submitted in time for departmental comments prior to last week's meeting.

Restaurant To Replace Quincy Center Bar

By SCOTT JACKSON

A local restaurateur plans to convert a long-time Quincy Center barroom into a new restaurant specializing in pub fare.

The Board of License Commissioners on June 7 approved the transfer of the all-alcohol license held by Tully's Café to the new restaurant, Kilroy's on the Square, which will move into the former home of Tully's at 24 Cottage Ave.

Kerri Delaney, who runs the nearby restaurant 16C, will be the manager of the new restaurant. She is in the process of renovating the space at 24 Cottage Ave to add a kitchen.

"We are pretty much doing the whole thing over because we're going to put a very small kitchen in with a very limited menu - more pub food as opposed to 16C, which is more entrees," she said.

The new restaurant will be open for lunch and dinner, she added, and will stay open until 1 a.m. seven days a week.

There is no opening date yet for Kilroy's on the Square with the renovations still ongoing, Delaney said.

The board members approved the transfer of the liquor license in a unanimous vote.

"If it is half as good as 16C, it will be a success," said Police Chief Paul Keenan. "You run an excellent business."

"Good luck," added City Clerk Nicole Crispo, the board's chairperson. "I'm sure it will be wonderful."

In other business on June 7, the board:

Granted a special-use permit and one-day beer and wine license to the Thomas Crane Public Library for its After Hours at the Crane: The Jazz Age event scheduled for this Friday from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

Approved the transfer of the all-alcohol license held by Presidential Pub, 29 Temple St., to a new ownership group led by manager Harvey Guilbault. Guilbault said he's not planning to make any changes to the barroom, other than cleaning it up a bit.

Approved the transfer of the retail beer and wine license presently held by Quincy Market, 33 Washington St., to a new ownership group led by manager

Hugh MacDonnell. The store could open in mid-July. A Marylou's Coffee store will operate at that location as well.

Approved the transfer of the retail all-alcohol license held by 2030 Ocean St. LLC to Bhudevi Inc. d/b/a Wine & Market. The license is for a planned store at 67 Billings Rd. The board had granted the license to the former license holder in January for the same location.

Granted one-day liquor licenses to Heritage Sports Ventures for New England Free Jacks playoff games at Veterans' Memorial Stadium on June 19, 25 and 26.

Russell Park To Close For Two Months

By SCOTT JACKSON

Part of a Quincy Center roadway will be closed for two months this summer as work continues on a pair of nearby developments.

A portion of Russell Park will be closed starting on June 27 through approximately Sept. 2, the developer, FoxRock Properties, announced in a message to the community.

"We evaluated the possibility of keeping a portion of the street open to thru traffic, but it would have resulted in numerous changes to the traffic pattern over the course of the summer, which would be less safe and create other issues such as an increased roadwork duration by approximately 50 percent," the company wrote.

"The street closure will allow our team to safely move between the two buildings, perform utility work in the street and make

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 111-YEAR-OLD real photo postcard view of Billings Road looking west from near the end of Freeman Street. The Norfolk Downs business district was just being developed in the distance. The Park Land Company that laid out the residential subdivision here in 1890 made Billings Road the main thoroughfare with large house lots on each side. They also arranged for the new Quincy Street Railway Company to run trolley tracks down the middle of the street. The tracks ran through a series of grassy islands much like those on Elm Avenue. House lot buyers got discounted trolley tickets. In this view, the tracks can still be seen, but the trolleys were discontinued in 1920. Soon after this postcard was published in 1911, the city took about a dozen empty house lots seen on the right and built the Parker School there in 1915.

Council OKs $11.46 Million Borrowing For Sewer Work

By SCOTT JACKSON

At their meeting on June 6, city councillors approved a pair of loans totaling $11.46 million to make improvements to the city's sewer system.

The first loan, for $4.33 million, is from the MWRA's infiltration and inflow reduction program, which provides interest-free loans paid back over a ten-year period. The program is designed to reduce the amount of water that makes its way into the sewer system, saving ratepayers money.

"It will help with our infiltration and inflow removal projects, which prevent rainwater, groundwater and seawater from getting into the sewers, which obviously costs ratepayers money," Al Grazioso, the city's commissioner of public works, told councillors during the meeting.

Grazioso said the design and permitting of the improvements will be completed in the fall and the city would go out to bid for the work in the winter. The work will be done in fiscal years 2024, 2025 and 2026.

The loan will also pay for surveys to evaluate the city's sewer, an EPA requirement, the commissioner said. Remaining funds can be used for additional sewer repairs.

Councillors approved the MWRA loan in a 7-0 vote during that evening. Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy was not in attendance for the meeting and Ward 6 Councillor William Harris was not present for that vote.

The second loan, for $7.13 million, will be financed through the Massachusetts Clean Water Trust. It carries a maximum interest rate of 2 percent and expected principal forgiveness, Grazioso wrote in a memo to councillors.

The sewer and water quality improvement projects the loan will pay for will be designed and permitted during the remainder of the calendar year, Grazioso wrote, and put out to bid in early 2023. The final terms of the loan will be determined once the design of the work is complete.

Councillors approved that loan in a 6-1 vote, with Anne Mahoney opposed. Mahoney said she appreciated the work that will be done with the loan but, with financial uncertainty looming, said it was the type of project the administration could have paid for with America Rescue Plan Act funds.

"This is the stuff we could be spending our ARPA money on," Mahoney said. "We are heading into some real uncertain times in the next 12, 24, 36 months. We don't know what's going to be happening in the economy. There are predictions... we could be going into a recession."

traffic improvements to the road without intermittent shutdowns and closures. It will also significantly reduce non-local traffic down Russell Park. We currently anticipate that this will be the only time this type of prolonged closure will be necessary."

The street will be closed between roughly 18 Russell Park and Hancock Street, the developer said. Vehicles traveling toward Hancock Street on Russell Park (westbound) will perform a U-turn where the median currently breaks. Vehicles traveling from Hancock Street will need to use Whitney Road or alternate routes to access Russell Park.

The road closure is related to FoxRock's ongoing work at 1170 Hancock St. and 1200 Hancock St., which are located on either side of Russell Park. FoxRock has dubbed the two developments Center & Stone.

The company plans to restore the two-story main entrance to the Masonic Temple building at 1170 Hancock St. and create a six-story addition in the rear. The existing part of the building will house a restaurant and 66 apartments will be located in the new addition.

The Masonic Temple was originally built in 1926, according to the city's online property records. It was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1989. The rear portion of the building was gutted by a four-alarm fire in 2013.

The property at 1200 Hancock St. was formerly home to a Citizens Bank branch, which was demolished earlier this spring. In its place, FoxRock will construct a six-story building with 135 apartments and 3,700 square feet of retail space.

The former Citizens Bank building was constructed in 1974. It had been home to the Quincy Savings Bank before the company was acquired by Citizens Bank.

A total of 234 parking spaces are included in FoxRock's plans for the two sites on Hancock Street.

The work at 1170 Hancock St. is slated for completion in the fall of 2023, the company said in its update, and the whole project will be finished by early 2024.

Mayor Burgin In Bid For 3rd Term

Leaving no doubt as to his political intentions for the future, Mayor Thomas S. Burgin today issued a clear cut statement announcing his candidacy for re-election for a third term as chief executive of the city.

The statement served as the first announcement formally offered for the 1938 Mayoral election, now five months away.

Three successive years of reductions in the city tax rate as well as decreases in Quincy's total valuation and bonded debt and major city construction projects since 1935, were stressed in Mayor Burgin's announcement.

PARKING METERS RECOMMENDED

The installation of parking meters on the streets of Quincy Center was recommended by a special city council committee, which has been studying the traffic regulations in the city since last March.

City Councillor Frank N. Orcott of North Quincy reported the "majority" of the special committee including himself, Councillors William W. Jenness and Edward J. Sandberg, were in favor of the installation of the meters.

The Ward Six Councillor introduced an order calling for amendments in the city ordinances to legalize the installation of the meters.

One serious blockade to the future installation of the parking meters in Quincy Center arose when City Solicitor John D. Smith told the city council that in his opinion the meters would be illegal.

PENSION ORDER VOTE CRITICIZED

Accusing the City Council of "willing before political pressure," William M. Edmonston, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, called on Mayor Burgin to "promptly veto" the City Council order approving increased pensions for city foremen, which was passed at City Hall.

"The mayor must certainly promptly veto this about face order in which the City Council is going back on themselves and on a vote of the people of the city in which a contributory pension for city employees was approved back in 1934," Edmonston, the Taxpayers Association representative, stated.

From now through Labor Day, the bookshop is offering a buy-one-get-one-free deal on all fiction books, which includes the store's special sections for mysteries and science-fiction.

In addition, the shop's already reduced price for all CDs and DVDs is still being offered at $1, at the buy-one-get-one-free value.

port the library's diverse community programs not funded by the city, such as movies, how-to programs, concerts, public lectures, and those ever-in-demand events for children and teens.

Open on Thursday evenings from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., the intimate shop is managed and staffed completely by volunteers and welcomes all those interested in helping out.

Granite RockOUT Celebrates Pride Month With Pride Flag Raisings, $5,600 Donation To Support LGBTQA+ Athletes

Granite Telecommunications announces the company will celebrate Pride Month by displaying Pride flags at each of Granite's 12 locations around the U.S. and will donate $5,600 to the Ryan O'Callaghan Foundation, which provides scholarships, support and mentorship programs for LGBTQA+ athletes.

Granite also will announce the first recipient of the Allison Ordway Pride Leadership Award as part of planned Pride Month activities organized by the Granite RockOUT internal resource group for diversity and inclusion.

Pride Month, celebrated each June, is when the world's lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and asexual (LGBTQA+) communities celebrate the freedom to be themselves and commemorate the Stonewall uprising in June 1969 in New York City, which is considered a spark of the modern gay rights movement.

Pride flags will be on display at Granite's headquarters in Massachusetts, two locations in Florida, and at locations in Rhode Island, New York City, Georgia, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia, Tennessee and California.

"The response from our Granite team members around the country has been enthusiastic and open," said Raul Medina, RockOUT Committee Chairperson and National Relationship

Development Manager at Granite. "We're grateful to Granite's leadership for setting the tone of inclusion and positivity."

In June Granite RockOUT also will announce the first recipient of the Allison Ordway Pride Leadership Award, which will be given out monthly to a nominated Granite team member. The award is given in memory of Allison Ordway, a talented salesperson and longtime member of Granite's Relationship Development team, who passed in 2021 after a long battle with cancer.

"Allie was a proud member of the LGBTQA+ community and was generous with her time and her earnings, supporting causes close to her and helping her Granite teammates," said Medina. "She was energetic, smart, playful and amazingly talented. We miss her terribly and are proud to dedicate this award in her memory."

As part of Pride Month activities, Granite RockOUT will host several events for Granite teammates, including:

- June 17: A virtual panel on "How to Succeed in Corporate America as an OUT LGBTQA+ Professional." Scheduled panelists include: Colby Clark, Enterprise Solution Consultant at Five9; Trevor Boylston, CPSM, CPSD, Sourcing and Supplier Diversity Professional at Boston Scientific; R. Mitchell Thomas, Senior Analyst at Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts; and Peg McDermott, President, COGO Interactive

- Other Pride Month activities include wellness and self-care events.

Save Money By Planting Flower Seeds Directly In The Garden

By MELINDA MYERS

Don't worry if you have already spent most of your plant budget for the year. Fill voids in your gardens and containers with heat tolerant annuals planted from seeds directly in the garden.

Zinnia and marigolds are traditional favorites often started from seeds planted directly in the garden. These germinate quickly and begin flowering in about eight weeks.

Zinnias are heat and drought tolerant once established. The Profusion series are compact, disease resistant, and produce flowers early and all season long. The Zahara series of zinnias are also heat and drought tolerant and resistant to leaf spot and mildew. Zinnias have excellent pollinator appeal and make great cut flowers.

Moss rose's drought tolerance makes it an excellent choice for sandy, gravelly, and rocky areas. The fine seeds make it a bit more challenging to plant. Try mixing the seeds with sand to help distribute the seeds more evenly. Look for varieties like Afternoon Delight and the Happy Hour and Sundial series with flowers that open earlier or stay open later in the day, extending your enjoyment.

Cleome is a big annual that can easily fill the space between those small, newly planted shrubs. It prefers full sun and moist well-drained soil but will tolerate dry conditions. Thin seeds so the final spacing of plants is between 1 to 3 feet. The more space, the fuller and bushier the plant. These plants reseed readily so watch for volunteer plants in next year's garden.

Sunflowers are commonly started from seeds in the garden. You will find single and double flowered varieties ranging in height from 18 inches to 12 feet or more. Stagger your planting to extend the bloom time. Plant seeds every two weeks, so you have lots of fresh flowers to enjoy. Just check the seed packet for the number of days from planting until flowering. Make sure your last planting has time to reach maturity and bloom before the end of your growing season.

Mexican sunflower is not as well known as the common sunflower but is just as welcome in the garden. The bright orange flowers combine nicely with yellow, blue, and purple flowers and attract butterflies and other pollinators to the garden. Grow these in a sunny area with well-drained soil. Avoid windy locations that may cause the brittle stems to break. Give this big plant plenty of room to reach its mature size. Mexican sunflower grows four to six feet tall and two to three feet wide. Fiesta del Sol and Goldfinger are shorter varieties that are a better fit for smaller spaces.

Check the seed packet for more details on planting seeds of these and other flowers directly in the garden. With proper planting and care you will have lots of flowers to enjoy this season.

Melinda Myers has written more than 20 gardening books. She hosts The Great Courses "How to Grow Anything" DVD series and the nationally-syndicated Melinda's Garden Moment TV & radio program. Myers is a columnist and contributing editor for Birds & Blooms magazine and her website is www.MelindaMyers.com.

Activities Focus On Communication, Decision Making, Leading By Example

Fifth grade student leaders from each school were invited to attend this year's Fifth Grade Student Council Leadership Summit June 2 at the Tirrell Room, Quincy.

Students began their morning being divided into three groups (John Adams Group, John Quincy Adams Group and Abigail Adams Group). Each group participated in three interactive Leadership Activities, which concluded with a team challenge.

Activities focused on three important attributes of becoming a leader:

- Communication
- Decision Making, and
- Leading By Example

Thank you to members of the Superintendent's Leadership Team and Quincy High School Senior Class Officers who facilitated the activities.

Following a continental breakfast, students heard from Community Leaders Maria Fruci, Manager, Charitable & Community Relations for Stop and Shop Companies and Mia Heim, Quincy High School Senior Class vice president, Class of 2022, who shared the characteristics and their stories of being a Leader.

Each fifth grade student leader participating in the event received an Award Certificate from their school principal. Special thanks to Superintendent Kevin W. Mulvey, Assistant Superintendent Erin Perkins, Mayor Thomas Koch, School Committee Vice-Chairperson Frank Santoro, member Kathryn Hubley, and Ms. Maria Fruci for their participation in the Fifth Grade Student Council Leadership Summit.

Lemon Ricotta Cake

By MARIE

My granddaughter, Stacey, emailed me this recipe just having made it for a gathering that she had just hosted. The cake got rave reviews by all of the attendees, so I thought I would share Stacey's recipe with you.

She said she got the recipe from the internet and as soon as she saw how delicious that it looked and sounded that she had to try it and send it along to me for my readers.

Any cake is a delicious dessert, a lemon ricotta cake is even better!!

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-inch springform pan with butter and powdered sugar.

Directions and Ingredients:

- ¾ cup butter, softened (equals 1 ½ sticks)
- 1 ½ cups sugar
- 12 ounces whole milk ricotta cheese
- 4 ounces Greek vanilla yogurt

- 3 large eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 large lemon, zested and juiced
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 ½ cups flour
- powdered sugar for dusting top of cake (optional)

In a large mixing bowl, cream together the butter and sugar until well blended.

Add the ricotta cheese and Greek yogurt and mix until light and fluffy - this will take approximately 4 to 5 minutes.

Mix in the eggs, one by one. Add in the vanilla, lemon zest and juice, mixing well.

Add in the baking soda, salt, and flour and mix until well blended.

Pour the batter into the prepared springform pan.

Bake for 45 to 55 minutes.

Let cool in pan for 15 minutes before removing the collar and base of the pan.

Cool on a wire rack and dust with powdered sugar. Goes great with a cup of your favorite coffee or tea!!

Avocado Tuna

By SUZIE

Now that the weather is warming up and summer is around the corner, here is one of my absolute favorite summer recipes. Loaded with important healthy fats that support total health, protein and veggies, fruit (don't forget avocados are technically fruits!) this will be a hit for your family or to bring to an outdoor get together

• 1 can tuna (I use "safe catch" since this brand has the lowest mercury and are environmentally conscious)

• Mayo to taste (I use Sir Kenningston organic mayo or Tessa Maes, one to two tablespoons)

• Three thinly sliced green onions

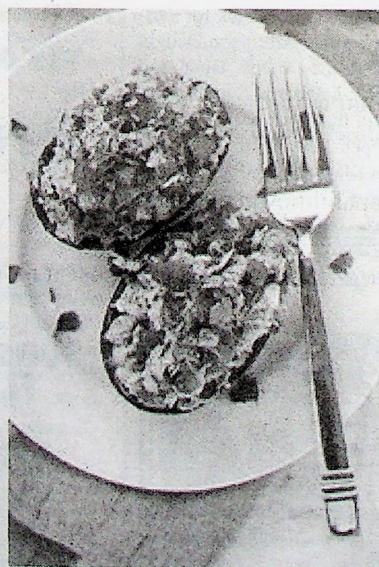

• Dash of balsamic vinegar

• One stalk of celery, chopped fine, half a red pepper, chopped fine

• I like garlic in my tuna but that is optional, I usually just do garlic granules or powder

• 2 ripe avocados, halved and pitted

Mix tuna and other ingredients well, and just spoon into avocado! You can squeeze some lemon on the avocado before filling to avoid the brown color if not serving right away.

Feel free to add whatever else you want to the tuna, like tomatoes, parsley or red onion. This is also great with chicken salad as well. ENJOY!

Social Security Matters I'm A Widower With 3 Minor Children - What About Social Security?

By RUSSELL GLOOR
National Social Security Advisor
at the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My wife passed away a few days ago and I have three children - ages 15, 11, and 10. Is there anything I need to do? Signed: Suddenly Widowed

Dear Suddenly Widowed: We are so sorry to hear of your wife's passing; please accept our condolences for your loss. Here's what you need to know about Social Security:

- Your wife's minor children will all be eligible for a survivor benefit, which will be based upon the Social Security benefit amount your wife had earned up to the month she died. The children can collect their survivor benefit until they are 18 years old (or 19 if they are still in high school).

- The standard minor child benefit amount is 75% of your wife's "primary insurance amount" (or PIA, which is the benefit she had earned until she died) but, since there will be three children collecting, the Family Maximum will apply. The Family Maximum limits total survivor benefits to between 150% and 180% of your wife's PIA. Typically, with 3 survivors, the Family Maximum should come out to about 175% of your wife's PIA. Social Security will determine these numbers when you apply for benefits for the children, which you should do by calling 1.800.772.1213, or making an appointment at your local SS field office (find it at www.ssa.gov/locator). The funeral home which handled your wife's arrangements will send a copy of her death certificate to Social Security, but SS will probably require you to provide each child's Social Security number and birth certificate, and you may also need to provide your wife's death certificate if they ask for it. As each child becomes age-ineligible for minor child benefits, the benefit for each remaining minor child will automatically increase, up to their maximum 75% of your wife's PIA.

- Because your children are minors, you will need to act as their Representative Payee. Social Security will guide you through that when you contact them to apply for benefits for the children, but it essentially means that their benefits will be paid directly to you and you will be obligated to use that money on behalf of the children. You can review Social Security's Representative Payee rules at this link: www.ssa.gov/payee/.

- Regardless of your age, as your wife's surviving spouse with minor children you could be eligible for a "child in care" surviving spouse benefit until the youngest child is 16, but you should be aware of the following:

- If you are working full time, you probably will be ineligible for child-in-care spouse benefits because of your earnings. Social Security imposes an earnings limit for those collecting early spousal or survivor benefits.

- If you are eligible for child-in-care benefits and collect the same, it would detract from the benefit amount each of your children will get because of the Family Maximum discussed above. In other words, the Family Maximum amount (which Social Security will determine based on your wife's PIA) is the total amount that can be paid out on your wife's record, regardless of how many survivors are collecting.

As your wife's spouse, you will also be entitled to a one-time lump sum death benefit of $255, which you can request when you speak with Social Security. Once again, please accept our condolences on the loss of your wife. I hope the above information is helpful at this difficult time.

Public Hearing On Sea Street Residential Development Continued

By SCOTT JACKSON

A planned public hearing on a proposal to construct a new residential building on Sea Street was continued at the last minute until August.

JVC Sea Street LLC has proposed constructing the new residential building at 105 Sea St., a 27,597-square-foot parcel in a Residence B zoning district that was formerly home to Imperial Terrace. The managers of the LLC are James Timmins, Quincy's city solicitor, and his son, Christopher, according to corporate records filed with the secretary of state's office.

The proposed building first went before the Zoning Board of Appeals in the fall, but those proceedings were ultimately put on hold to give the Planning Board time to review the development first. The Planning Board held its initial hearing on the proposal on April 13, when the developers pitched a three-story, 20-unit project, which a dozen area residents voiced concerns over.

The Planning Board was set to hold a second hearing on the proposal on June 8, however, the public hearing was continued before it began after the applicants' attorney, Christopher Carroll, requested the matter be put on hold until the board's next meeting on Aug. 3. Carroll requested the continuance in a letter that was read into the record an hour after the meeting had begun, after the board voted to approve two other projects and granted a continuance to a third.

In his letter, Carroll said the continuance was necessary because changes were being made to the proposal, including a reduction in the number of units.

"Our team has had further discussions with the planning director regarding this project, which resulted in further changes to the proposal. The changes included a reduction in the unit number and modifications to the front setback, which we believe will improve the submittal before you," Carroll wrote.

"The changes require further engineering work, which could not be timely completed for tonight's meeting. In discussions with the planning director, we have agreed to continue the hearing on this matter to your Aug. 3 meeting."

After the request for the continuance was made, Councillor Anne Mahoney said the request should have come at the start of the meeting, not an hour into it.

"I know we are asking them to come back with revised plans, but every time we do this we're kicking the can down the road and it's making people maybe less likely to think that there is a fair process that is happening so people's voices can be heard. I just want to raise that as a concern as we move forward, because obviously these meetings are challenging for people to come to," Mahoney said.

"This is the city solicitor's project. He should know the rules. He should have had this in earlier so this could have been postponed or continued earlier so people could go on with their lives tonight."

Richard Meade, the chairperson of the Planning Board, said the board received the letter late and apologized on behalf of the board to those residents who had been waiting for the public hearing on the proposal to begin.

"We agree with you - we don't want people having to sit through something and then find out that we're, as you're representing, kicking it down the road," he said.

Meade also said it would be important for the applicant to file revised plans well ahead of the Aug. 3 meeting. Plans are posted online on the city's website, quincyma.gov.

The June 8 meeting was held remotely via Zoom, as was the April meeting. Future Planning Board meetings will be held in-person inside City Hall.

On Tuesday, June 7, at approximately 6:15 p.m., Officer Walker was monitoring traffic in the area of 45 Quincy Ave. when his attention was drawn to a gray Rav 4 with excessive tint. The vehicle was leaving the Gulf Gas Station at 451 Quincy Ave.

Due to the heavy window tint, Officer Walker was unable to observe the operator of the vehicle. Officer Walker observed the vehicle cut across two lanes of traffic, while failing to signal, and take a right onto Southern Artery. Officer Walker pulled onto Southern Artery in an attempt to conduct a motor vehicle stop. Officer Walker observed this vehicle traveling north bound in the south bound lane at a high rate of speed. These actions caused multiple vehicles to have to swerve out of the road to avoid getting struck. Officer Walker activated his emergency blue lights and sirens and was able to get behind the vehicle at Southern Artery and Washington St. The vehicle failed to stop and continued north bound on Southern Artery. Officer Walker advised dispatch of the incident and requested assistance.

The vehicle then took a right onto Baxter Avenue and came to a stop at the end of Baxter Road, which is a dead end street. The operator exited the vehicle and took off running in the direction of Mound Street. Officer Walker pursued the operator on foot, announcing Quincy Police, and demanded

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE SGT. KARYN BARKAS
Public Information Officer
Quincy Police Department

the operator to stop. The suspect refused to stop, continuing through Mound Street and then towards the Town River Yacht Club parking lot. Officer Walker provided the following description to responding units: a black male, wearing a gray sweatshirt and black sweatpants.

Shortly after, K9 Officer Cooper and Officer Murphy located an individual matching the description in the parking lot of the Town River Yacht Club. The individual was out of breath and sweating. The suspect was placed in handcuffs. Officer Walker arrived on scene and positively identified the detained individual as the person that had failed to stop for him and had fled from the vehicle.

After being provided with his Miranda Rights, Officer Walker asked the operator why he failed to stop. The operator stated that he ran because he had a suspended license. Officer Walker confirmed that the operator's license to operate a motor vehicle was suspended. He also learned that the operator had an outstanding warrant for his arrest for unarmed robbery. A key fob belonging to the vehicle was located in the suspect's front right pocket.

Due to the fact that the vehicle was left in the middle of the road, Officer Walker requested a tow. Located in the vehicle was a Massachusetts Identification card belonging to the suspect and a large plastic bag containing loose pieces of alleged crack cocaine and thirty-four individually knotted corner bags. These smaller bags also contained an off-white rock-like substance believed to be crack cocaine.

Due to the amount of cocaine, and the fact that there were multiple individually packaged bags, Officer Walker had reason to believe that the cocaine was packaged for the illegal distribution and sale. The cocaine weighed approximately 35.25 grams with packaging. The substance was field tested and the analysis confirmed the presumptive presence of cocaine base (crack cocaine).

The 29-year-old male from Boston was placed under arrest and transported to the Quincy Police Station to be booked in the usual manner. He was charged with speeding, marked lanes violation, failure to stop for police, reckless operation of a motor vehicle, resisting arrest, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, and trafficking cocaine. Great job!

BBB Tip: New College Grads, Watch Out For These Scams

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

This year's class of college graduates are getting ready to start their new lives! It's a big transition that includes several important changes. Grads may be moving to a new city, finding a new place to live, or searching for a new job. Graduation also often means new financial responsibilities, such as starting payments on student loans.

College graduates are navigating many life changes, and scammers are eager to take advantage of their inexperience. The following tips can help new grads avoid common scams.

Know the terms of your student loans

One of the most common ways scammers target college graduates is with fake loan forgiveness opportunities. You may receive an unsolicited email, phone call, or text message stating that you can qualify for lowered payments through a debt forgiveness program. To use the company's services, just fill out a form and pay a fee. Some of these companies are real, but they pitch their services with false claims and incomplete information. Other companies are fakes, only hoping to get their hands on your personal information and money.

Scammers may also contact college grads regarding student loan repayment hiatus in response to COVID-19. See the latest U.S. information on loan repayment. Check Canada's latest student loan information. Scammers may claim that to take advantage of the program, you need to complete a form or pay a fee. In reality, you may not need to do this, so check your facts before giving anyone your information.

Understanding the ins and outs of your student loan - what kind of interest you owe, when you need to start paying (in most cases you won't need to make a payment until six months after you've graduated), and for how long you'll be expected to make payments - will protect you from these scams.

Be wary of unsolicited messages about unpaid tuition

Some con artists contact graduates or their parents claiming some of their tuition was left unpaid. If it isn't paid immediately, the graduate's degree will be revoked. Scammers may ask you to send money via wire transfer or prepaid debit cards.

Whether you are contacted by phone, email, or text message, be wary of anyone who contacts you out of the blue. Government agencies, as well as most higher education facilities, will contact you by mail initially. If you aren't sure if a message is legitimate, do some research to verify the person's claims. Ask to contact them later. Then, investigate by looking up information on the official website or calling your school's bursar's office. Don't give in to pressure to make a decision right away.

Do research before accepting jobs or job interviews

Scammers may offer recent graduates high paying, easy, entry-level jobs. Con artists are skilled at drawing new grads in by promoting unrealistic wages for generally labeled job positions, such as "virtual assistant" or "customer service rep." They may ask for your personal information, including your bank account and Social Security number, claiming they need it to set up direct deposit or file taxes. In other cases, scammers require you to pay for training. In yet another version, you may be "accidentally" overpaid with a fake check and asked to send back the extra funds.

If you are considering a job with a company you aren't familiar with, do some research before you complete an application or agree to an interview. Make sure the company has legitimate contact information, and the position is posted on their corporate website. Scammers often steal the names of real companies for their phony job postings.

For tips for avoiding scams while job hunting, check out BBB's report on employment scams.

Watch out for rental scams

Find a gorgeous apartment in a trendy neighborhood at an affordable price? There's a good chance that it's a scam. According to a survey by Apartment List, 43% of people looking for a rental online have encountered a bogus listing.

In many cases, scammers simply copy the photo and description of a real property. Then, they post it online with their own contact information and try to get a deposit and first month's rent from the victim.

If you are looking to rent a home or apartment, find out how much other rental properties in the area cost before you sign a lease. Scammers often lure victims by promising low rents, extra amenities, and a great location. If the price seems much better than offered elsewhere, it may be a scam. Also, be sure to see the apartment or house in person. Don't send money to someone you've never met for an apartment you haven't seen. If you can't visit an apartment or house yourself, ask someone you trust to go and confirm that it is what was advertised. Finally, read lease agreement documents before you sign. Don't be embarrassed to consult with friends or family members who may be more knowledgeable on the subject if you have doubts or questions.

O'Donnell Highlights Registry Of Deeds Customer Service Center

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers if they have a Registry related question, the answer is just a phone call away by dialing the Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101. The department is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"The Customer Service Center is a one-stop shop for Norfolk County homeowners and institutional users who have land related document questions," O'Donnell said. "These questions can vary such as confirming the current ownership of a particular property, or verifying if a discharge of a property's mortgage has been filed after the loan has been paid off. We are glad to help with any inquiry, whether you come through our doors or call us by phone."

O'Donnell further noted: "The department can also inform customers about the various cost for filing and receiving land documents. Upon a customer's request - whether it's by visiting us here at the Registry or by a direct mail request - we can provide copies of documents to you for a fee of $1 per page, plus an additional $1 per document to cover the cost of postage."

The Registry only accepts cash or check payments. In addition, the Customer Service Center staff is happy to answer questions about the Homestead Act, a law which provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"For many, trying to ascertain information about land documents can be a very frustrating and intimidating experience," O'Donnell said. "Please know our trained customer service staff is well-versed in all areas of land document research. By utilizing our state-of-the-art land document research system, which is also available via www.norfolkdeeds.org, people can get answers to their property questions."

Notary services are also offered by the Customer Service Center.

Several staff members are notary publics," O'Donnell said. "We are more than glad to notarize any land document provided the person requesting the service appears before us and presents satisfactory proof of identification by showing either their driver's license or passport."

In conclusion, O'Donnell said:

"Providing first-class customer service is a core objective of the Registry's mission to serve the public. We strive to ensure our customers have a positive experience when interacting with us. The bottom line is: We are glad to be of service to you."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is located at 649 High St. in Dedham. Form Follows Function: It's Fundamental To Interior Decor!

Ask Barbara Graceffa:

'Secretary Of The Interior'

I'm about to add an addition to my home which will include a dining room. I'm torn between styles and sizes. Which comes first? What insight can you share so I make the right choice with table and chairs? Marisol Ahhh, the age-old debate of form or function. Whether you are a seasoned interior decorator or a novice homeowner overwhelmed by the many choices, most of us marvel over pretty things in magazines or showrooms - maybe it's the shape, color, design, materials, unique character, or even remembrance of things past or dreams of a different lifestyle - and find ourselves tempted by the form of a furniture piece or accessory item. Yet, form does take a backseat to function in good interior decoration.

That said, how many people do you need to seat in your dining room? The answer, combined with the size and shape of your room, will help you determine the first choice when it comes to tables.

Here are some guidelines from a great book called Home Décor Cheat Sheets: Need to Know Stuff for Stylish Living. Round tables work better in a smaller square room and typically fit more people because there are no corners on the table. If you choose smaller chairs or ones without arms, you can often accommodate more dinner guests, but here are the guidelines. A 48" or 54" round table comfortably seats four, a 72" table seats twice as many, while an oval table measuring 42" x 60" seats six. Rectangular tables work well in longer rooms and have capacity for larger crowds. At a rectangular table, each guest should have two feet of eating space to be comfortable. Four will fit nicely at a 36" x 48" table, six at a 60" or 72" x 38" table, and eight at the 84" x 38" size. Traditionally, an armchair rests at each end while bench seating can often accommodate more people, especially little ones (when not at their own kiddy table)!

In my next article, I'll help you decide on dining room table and chair styles. For example, do pedestal, trestle, cantilevered, or farmhouse options pair better with traditional, contemporary, or transitional styles and which chairs complement your table choice? Stay tuned.

'Be The Hero Others Have Been For You,' North Quincy Grads Told

By SCOTT JACKSON

The valedictorian of North Quincy High School said he and fellow classmates all had heroes who helped pull them from the depths of the despair along the way, and told his peers to be that hero for others in need.

The 345 members of North Quincy High School's Class of 2022, the school's 89th graduating class, received their diplomas on June 6 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The students were all robed in red for the occasion, which was held on a picturesque early summer evening.

Class Valedictorian Frank Lee, who will attend Harvard University in the fall, opened his remarks by thanking the countless family and friends in attendance for supporting the Class of 2022.

"We could not have accomplished what we have today without the sacrifices our families have made for us," Lee said. "In particular, I would like to extend my deepest appreciation to my parents and my brother, Peng, for their unending love, faith and support throughout my life."

Lee said it was an honor to represent his fellow graduates and reflect on the journey they shared over the past four years.

"All of us here have been blessed with the free, quality education, along with the resources and opportunities, that the North Quincy High School community provides. We are very lucky to have received such an exceptional education and, moving forward, I hope every member of

QHS Valedictorian Message To Class Of 2022

'Despite Everything In Our Way, We Have Come Through On Top'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Looking back on the last four years, Quincy High School's valedictorian said she and her classmates faced and overcame challenges that no other generation of students has seen.

The 397 members of Quincy High School's Class of 2022, the school's 147th graduating class, received their diplomas on June 7 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The students were decked out in blue caps and gowns for the ceremony, which took place on a beautiful early summer evening.

Speaking at the commencement, Class Valedictorian Cassandra Gordon, who will attend the University of Massachusetts Amherst in the fall, reflected on a portion of the poem "Worth While" by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, saying, "It is easy enough to be pleasant, When life flows by like a song, But the man worthwhile is one who will smile, When everything goes dead wrong."

"That last line seemed very relatable to me because, let's be honest, during these past four years, a lot of things have gone dead wrong," Gordon said.

"Freshman year had the stereotypical awkwardness of teenagers trying to fit in at a huge new school. We made friends and learned about ourselves while struggling through our classes and waiting to make cookies in the culinary section of freshman seminar. This, our only truly 'normal' year, went relatively smoothly.

"The next year, however, brought with it new struggles, the greatest of which, of course, was a pandemic. Here our path started to get bumpy."

It was during the spring of the class's sophomore year that the pandemic forced the closure of schools, Gordon recalled.

"In the fall of sophomore year, we started hearing rumors about a contagious virus that was going to take over the world. I thought that this was an exaggeration until spring came and cultural fair, robotics competitions, and so much more were put on hold while the city decided how best to react. We had to finish the year with virtual lessons that quickly became independent learning. Sophomore year had a hectic end," Gordon said.

"From there, things only got worse. After a summer trapped in quarantine with everything closing, school started up again completely online. While I loved being able to roll out of bed and attend class in my pajamas, not being able to see our friends and talk to our teachers in person was difficult. Remote schooling also had other difficulties such as our 'internet glitching,' causing us to miss the teacher's instructions.

"Eventually we had the options of hybrid learning and finally fully in-person learning, but it was not the same. Not everyone was in-person, we had to wear masks, and our desks were way too far apart to be able to effectively whisper to our friends. Junior year was full of unique challenges for everyone, but we made it through."

As seniors, Gordon said

the class was able to return to full in-person learning.

"This year, our senior year, we all walked in on our first day and were able to greet each other with hugs and high fives, even if our faces were still obscured by masks," she said. "We survived the dreaded AP tests, we received CVTE certi-

"As aspiring leaders, I hope everyone of us is able to make the North Quincy High School community proud in whatever field or career we decide to pursue."

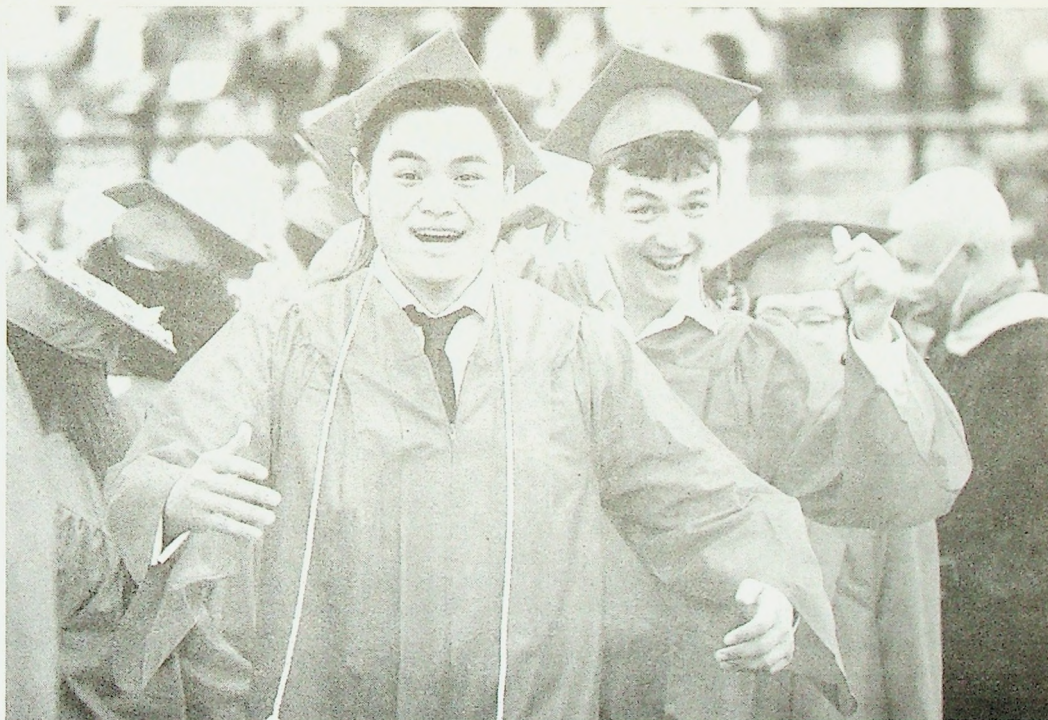

Lee said he and his peers all had heroes there to help them when needed, challenging his classmates to be that hero for someone in need.

"During high school, we all have people who helped us through times. In college and our careers, we will continue to meet new people, and I hope we will continue to befriend those who want the best for us," Lee said.

cations, we made beautiful art, and we made our voices heard. Our high school years did not 'flow by like a song,' yet here we all are, smiling, ready to move on to our next stage in life.

"We have made it. Despite everything getting in our way, we have come through on top. Later in Wilcox's poem, she continues by saying, 'The test of the heart is trouble, And it always comes with the years, And the smile that is worth the praises of earth, Is the smile that shines through tears.'

"Rather than letting these past few years get the best of us and hold us down, we have fought our way through challenges that no other generation of students have faced before – and now here we are, graduating today, as the Class of 2022. We will always face challenges in our lives, but it's how we react and persevere through the hard times that makes us strong."

Gordon closed her remarks by quoting the Twelfth Doctor from the television show Dr. Who, saying, "Never be cruel, has had our own unique experiences throughout high school, I am certain everyone had at least one moment where they felt as if they were at rock bottom. However, it was during those darkest times that our heroes emerged. By 'hero,' I mean that one family member, that one friend, that one teacher, or your own self, who pulled you from the depths of despair, and instilled within you the courage to overcome adversity, to continue to march forward, to rise above and become a better version of yourself.

"Today, I challenge each and every one of us to be the hero that others have been for you. When you notice someone is feeling down, acting unlike their usual selves, please do not hesitate to ask how they have been or how they are feeling. Extending a hand of compassion, even if it is simple as asking someone, 'how are you,' conveys to the person that you care, that there is someone out there who cares about how they are doing.

"When the day comes where all of us genuinely care for each other, where everyone feels a sense of belonging, affection and hope, we can be assured that the world will be a better place, and we will move toward a brighter future."

Class Salutatorian Adelin Chan, who will attend Cornell University in the fall, told her fellow classmates to "choose now."

"Choose to be happy now. Don't fall into the trap of saying, 'I will be happy when - I will be happy when I get an A on that paper, I will be happy only when I get a job and make lots of money.' Of course it's important to have goals, but don't delay your happiness for it. Allow yourself to feel good in the moment, and celebrate small wins along the way," Chan said.

"Choose to be kind now. Not just to the people you know, but also to the people you don't know. There are so many people who don't feel seen or valued enough, and it doesn't take much effort to reach out to them. Look at your friends - really look at them - and ask if they're OK. Be welcoming of others, always.

"Choose to speak up now. Find the courage to advocate for yourself and others. Someone once said, 'we spend our life up through high school trying to fit in, then we spend the rest of our life trying to stand out.' Our time to stand out and stand up starts now. Find your voice and amplify it. Choose your causes and fight for them. Push your boundaries and take that leap of action."

Class President Oliver Smith, who will attend the University of Maryland, said the past four years have taught the Class of 2022 the importance of perseverance.

"It was not your successes that brought you here - deep down below those victories lie countless failures. Each failure built off of the next and fortified your person. You used these losses to connect to a greater notion. The idea that it is OK to fail, and the idea that you will be OK in the end," Smith said.

"Now recall those instances of triumph - winning a game, scoring well on a test, or laughing with friends. These achievements are a product of our hard work and repeated failure.

These past four years have taught us all that we should persist and eventually we will find success."

In his remarks, Smith also remembered Liana S. "Lee Smits" Dararaksmey, a member of the class who died last August at the age of 17.

"I would like you all to take a few moments to honor and remember a fellow classmate of ours that would have been here with us today," Smith said. "Lee was a shining ray of light in the school community and it is our duty as the Class of

'22 that her memory lives on through us. As we all receive our diplomas today, I request that you all take a moment to commemorate Lee and reminisce on some of her beautiful qualities."

Principal Keith Ford said the word that comes to his mind when he thinks about the Class of 2022 is resilient, given all that the class has experienced during their four years in high school.

"This class started their high school careers, ninth and part of tenth grade, in school and suddenly they had to pivot to access their education remotely," Ford said. "Their daily interactions with peers and teachers changed overnight.

"If that wasn't enough, we told our students this year that they had to come back to school full-time and fully masked. We are mask-optional at present, but many still wrestle with the severity of this pandemic.

"That's a lot to digest, and still our students displayed the resilience to overcome all these obstacles to now say they are high school graduates."

military, into a trade, into the workforce, or down some other path, remember these past years and go forward knowing that even when things go wrong, you can smile. You can survive," Gordon said. "And you can always, always be kind."

Class President Sabrina Egan, who in the fall will attend Westfield State University, said she and her classmates are not the same people who walked into the Lloyd Hill auditorium on their first day of school their freshman year.

"We have become better and mature versions of who we were four years ago. Our unique experiences make us a class like no other," Egan said.

"In March of 2020, three quarters of the way through our sophomore year, our lives were forever changed by the start of a global pandemic. Our lives were ripped apart in an instant, the world shutting down around us. We persevered and adapted, adjusting to a challenging year of remote learning, and making serious sacrifices so we could stay safe -- never giving up because we knew what was at stake. We became resilient and strong.

"During this global pandemic, our class also brought about important social changes at our school, trying to not only make it better for our particular class, but also for the classes who follow."

Egan said she was proud to represent the class as its president.

"The skills we learned during these challenging times makes me even prouder to represent this class because it is clear that each of us has the potential to go out into this changing world and make it a better place for us and the generations to come," Egan said.

"As one door closes today, another one will open up for us tomorrow. Some of us will be going off to college, some straight into the workforce, and a select few will be proudly defending our country by joining the military."

School Principal Lawrence Taglieri said the class's perseverance during their four years makes their accomplishments even more impressive.

"The Class of 2022 has certainly not disappointed. In fact, you've stood out and worked together to leave a legacy of excellence and an enhanced sense of community at your school," Taglieri said.

"You'll hear it now, you'll hear it again, because it is true: Each of you have lived a story that includes obstacles not of your own creation. We all shared in the hardships that COVID has wrought, and it is this that makes your achievements all the more remarkable."

Quincy Artist Paintings Featured At Cape Cod Museum Of Art Exhibit

Artwork by Quincy artist Lydia Martin is featured in a new exhibit at the Cape Cod Museum of Art now through July 24.

Two of Martin's paintings - "Majeska" and "Doll Man" - were accepted into this juried exhibition entitled "All the World's A Stage."

"Theme shows can be fun," said juror Bill Evaul at the Cape Cod Museum of Art. "Give artists something to fix onto and their imagination will astound you. With this theme, the possibilities are wide open."

"As the [William Shakespeare] quote suggests, the world itself is a stage, which allows for almost anything. A landscape (the world) is a stage setting, with or without actors present. Then there is the literal stage, a structure for presenting performers or ideas with props,

Eye Institute Declares June Cataract Awareness Month

By DR. CAROLANN SPERANZO, DHS, RDO

Did you know the National Eye Institute documents that more than half of Americans over age 80 have experiences with cataracts? The Institute has declared June as Cataract Awareness Month. The focus is on providing information on risk factors and symptoms. Few realize that the eye has a lens through which images are relayed to the retina and then to the brain for a person to see. Over time, this lens does not flex and flatten as much as when younger, so particles begin to form a mass - a cataract. If located in the center, images take on a gray or yellowish tint and become cloudy to cause vision to become compromised. This is one eye condition that usually may be remedied with surgery inserting an intraocular implant to regain vision.

While cataracts are normally associated with aging, a very small percentage may appear in children (pediatric cataracts). Sometimes these conditions run in families or may be the result of trauma or health issues during pregnancy. Excessive exposure to UV rays from the sun may contribute to early cataracts - often called "sunshine cataracts." Other risks include diabetes which may cause inflammation in the eye. In addition, smoking and steroid use may affect the eyes in this way.

So, what to do if you feel you may be at risk of cataracts? It is important to see your ophthalmologist for a comprehensive eye examination. Most insurance companies cover one eye examination for health of the eyes each year. Be sure to check for your individual coverage. Often the staff at the ophthalmologists will help you with this.

It is important to review your condition and the type of cataract surgery with your eye doctor. Normally, this is a day surgery taking only a brief time with almost immediate recovery. Drops are usually required to be instilled prior to the surgery. (One easy technique for using eye drops is to lie down, use one hand to hold both upper and lower lashes and have gravity guide the drop into the eye.) Drops will continue for a few weeks post-surgery. While cataract surgery may be frightening (anything involving sight is scary), the results are impressive. Most take of the shield in a few hours and vision is near perfect although healing will continue over a few weeks/months.

Should you postpone cataract surgery? Cataracts usually pose little threat to the health of the eye in the early stages. Yet, the vision may be compromised enough to throw off depth perception. Most find the surgery easier when one's health is better and mobility is good. In addition, the post-surgery stage is merely annoying as you need to continue the drops for a few weeks. The most common result is the joy of having vision restored and balanced. Do keep in mind, standard policy is to do one eye at a time to have the chance to heal and wait a month or so

Nick Andrade, Sandy Cai Win Quincy Votes! Logo Contest

Two local students have won a total of $400 and subscriptions to The Quincy Sun for logos they designed for QuincyVotes!, a new non-partisan volunteer group that aims to inform and empower all community members in Quincy to engage in local issues and to substantially increase voter turnout in city elections.

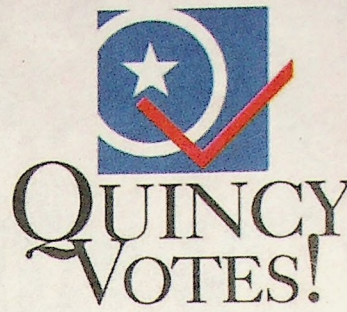

The contest, sponsored by QATV and Uncle Sam Rounseville, as well as QuincyVotes! volunteers, asked high school and college students in or from Quincy to design a logo for the new community organization. Fifteen entries were received by the contest deadline and the designs received more than 200 votes.

North Quincy High School graduate Nick Andrade won the top two prizes of $250 and $100 for his first and second place logo designs. Nick graduated from North Quincy High in 2018 and is a rising senior at Brown University. The design that took first

Arbella Insurance Foundation, Boston Celtics All-Star Program

The Arbella Insurance Foundation together with the Boston Celtics recently brought their exciting All-Star Program to Quincy Public Schools.

The goals of the program encouraged perfect attendance and a positive school culture for middle school students. The Launch Event, held at participating schools (Point Webster and South-West Middle School) in March, rallied students to try their best to reach school-wide goals (perfect attendance and promoting a positive culture, climate and diversity within sites) identified in School Improvement Plans. The event was visited by Celtics players and Celtics mascot, Lucky, who awarded Celtics game tickets to lucky students. All students received Celtics shirts.

Fun incentives, which encouraged youth to go above and beyond for their schools, communities and themselves were disseminated monthly to students to help build excitement.

The culminating event, for students reaching their goal, was an exclusive Celtics-themed Carnival, held at Veterans' Memorial Stadium May 26. QPS Supt. Kevin W. Mulvey welcomed the students and congratulated them on reaching their goal. Students had the opportunity to participate in carnival games, athletic contests, video game stations, etc. Following the carnival, students attended a cook out at Pageant Field.

NQ Boys' Volleyball Reaches Div. 2 State Tourney Final

By TOM JOYCE

The number-one seeded North Quincy boys' volleyball team defeated #4 Milford 3-1 Monday to advance to the Div. 2 state tournament championship.

The Raiders faced #3 Westfield Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at Worcester North High School. Westfield swept #2 seed Greater New Bedford Monday to reach the Div. 2 final match.

Leading the way for the Raiders against Milford were sophomore Cam Johnston with 15 kills, junior Dylan Clifford with 13 kills and junior Bobby Lin with 39 assists. NQ boys volleyball is the first team to make a state final appearance since the 2002 NQ girls' volleyball team.

THE NORTH QUINCY boys volleyball team advanced to the Div. 2 tournament semifinals with a 3-0 win over Nipmuc Regional last Friday night at NQHS. The win was celebrated with a "Final Four" banner and trophy similar to a sectional championship. a 3-0 win over Nipmuc Regional last Friday night.

The Raiders trailed by eight points midway through the first set but were still able to pull off a sweep.

North Quincy kept its success going with yet another sweep. The Raiders hosted Nipmuc in what would end up being a highly-competitive contest. Even so, the Raiders came out on top 3-0 in this MIAA Division 2 Elite Eight tournament game. With the win, the Raiders improved to 17-1 on the season and extended their winning streak to 17 games.

Although the Raiders trailed 17-9 about halfway through the first set, they came back and won it 25-23.

The Raiders pulled within a point, 20-19, thanks to a 10-3 run. The tail end of the run included back-to-back aces from Anthony Chiu and a kill from Nate Caldwell. This forced a Nipmuc timeout. After the timeout, Nipmuc got momentum back on its side; the team went on a 3-0 run and looked like they would win the set.

That's not what happened.

How would the Raiders respond?

The Raiders had a 6-0 run of their own to win the set 25-23.

A hitting error against Nipmuc brought the Raiders within a point once again, and Cameron Johnston and Dylan Clifford helped the team not only tie the set, but take the lead. Johnston had a block that made it 23 apiece, and a Clifford kill that landed deep in Nipmuc territory gave the team a one-point edge. And following a Nipmuc timeout, Bobby Lin closed out the set; he had an ace that Nipmuc couldn't return.

The second set was also competitive, but the Raiders played ahead for nearly all of it.

The Raiders took a 6-4 lead on a kill from Lin; the lead was extended to four points, 10-6, following a hitting error by Nipmuc and a kill by Chiu.

The biggest lead of the set for the Raiders was six points: 23-17. That score came after a serving error by Nipmuc. Nipmuc responded with a 4-0 run to pull within two points, but a kill from Clifford put the Raiders up by three. After that, Nipmuc got another point, but Johnston capped off the set with a kill; the Raiders won it 25-22.

And the Raiders kept that momentum going in the third and final set of the contest. In it, they rolled over Nipmuc 25-14.

Part of the reason why the Raiders amassed such a large victory in the final set was strong serving. They had four aces in

QPS Equity, Diversity, Inclusion Director Hired

Former Boston Public Schools Administrator Named; New Principals For Quincy, NQ High Schools

By SCOTT JACKSON

An administrator from the Boston Public Schools has been named the new director of equity, diversity and inclusion for the Quincy Public Schools.

Supt. Kevin Mulvey announced the hiring of the new EDI director on June 10 amid a flurry of personnel moves, which will also see the city's two high schools welcome new principals. The hires are effective as of July 1, he said.

"Please join me in congratulating these administrators on their new roles in Quincy Public Schools beginning July 1," Mulvey wrote in a message to the community. "Each of the principals will have the opportunity to meet with the school staff before the end of the school year and will meet with their school communities prior to the opening of school."

Kim Ngo Connolly was hired as the district's director of equity, diversity and inclusion. She previously worked for the Boston Public Schools, most recently as the director of recruitment, cultivation and diversity programs. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from Boston University and an MBA from Babson College.

Mulvey announced plans to hire an equity, diversity and inclusion director in December, after students at the city's two high schools walked out of class to protest racism and hate speech. The new director will serve on the superintendent's leadership team.

Approximately 15 people applied for the new position after it was posted, Mulvey said previously. All of the applicants worked outside the district.

In addition to the new EDI director, Mulvey also said on June 10 that Lawrence Taglieri would serve as the district's director of academic programs. Taglieri has spent the past nine years as the principal at Quincy High School and was previously principal at Broad Meadows Middle School for eight years.

In his new role, Taglieri will join the curriculum team at the Coddington Building where he will work with Senior Curriculum Director Madeline Roy on the administration of the Art, Instrumental Music &

Choral, Physical & Health Education, Technology Engineering, and Library/Media programs for grades K through 12, Mulvey said.

Keith Ford will replace Taglieri as the principal at Quincy High School. Ford is completing his first year as the principal at North Quincy High School and was previously the assistant principal at Needham High School for five years.

Daniel Gilbert has been named the new principal at North Quincy High School. He has been the principal at Broad Meadows Middle School for nine years and had been the principal at the Snug Harbor Community School for five years.

Michael Marani will become the next principal at Broad Meadows. He has been principal at Snug Harbor for five years after four years there as the assistant principal.

Courtney Mitchell has been named the principal at South-West Middle School. She has spent the past two and a half years as the principal at the Merrymount Elementary School and was the assistant principal at the former Sterling Middle School – which South-West replaced – for five and a half years.

Janet Loftus was named the principal at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. She returned to the school in February after three years as principal at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School. She was previously the assistant principal at Lincoln-Hancock for five years.

Marisa Forrester will serve as the new principal at Beechwood Knoll. She was named acting principal there in February and previously was the district's coordinator of data and an elementary school teacher for eight years.

Susan Shea Connor has been named the acting principal at Merrymount. She has been an elementary school teacher and administrator in the district for eight years.

Scott Perfetuo has been named acting principal at Snug Harbor. He has been the assistant principal at the Parker Elementary School for ten years and a teacher in the district for more than 20.

the set. Caldwell had one. Adam Huang had another, and Johnston finished the set with back-to-back aces. Johnston's first ace tipped over the net, so Nipmuc was unable to return it.

With Monday nights' win over Milford, the Raiders are riding an 18-game winning streak including four tournament wins over #32 Fitchburg, #16 Minnechaug Regional, #9 Nipmuc and #14 Milford. The Raiders have not lost a match since dropping its season opener to Greater New Bedford April 6.

In the Round of 16, North Quincy swept #16-seed Minnechaug Regional High School 3-0 June 8.

Winning that game was no issue at all for the Raiders. They won 3-0 with a margin of victory of at least 10 points in each respective set.

The Raiders had been having larger margins of victory as of late. Following their win against Minnechaug, the Raiders had not lost even one set in their past four games -- two of which were postseason contests. Additionally, the Raiders had won their past 13 sets in a row dating back to the fourth and final set of their May 19 rivalry match against the Quincy Presidents; they won that contest 3-1.

In the Minnechaug game, the first and second sets went the same for the Raiders; they had no issue coming out on top in either set as the match cruised along. The Raiders took each of the first two sets of the contest 25-14. And the team closed it out with a set that was slightly more competitive, but still a good-sized win nonetheless. The Raiders took set No. 3 by a 25-15 margin. Nate Caldwell brought the third and final set of the contest to a close with a thunderous spike for the team's 25th point of the set.

Going into this one, Minnechaug had endured somewhat of a rough patch despite some real early season success. Although the team won its first round tournament matchup 3-0 over Frontier Regional (South Deerfield), it went into the tournament with a 8-11 regular season record.

Although in many cases, teams with a lot of talent tend to be on the older side, that's not the case for the Raiders. They are a young team this season that will return many of its key players next season; they only have three seniors on the roster this time around.

The roster for the Raiders this season includes: senior defensive specialist/

Quincy College To Launch Men's Ice Hockey Program This Fall

Quincy College will add to its athletic offerings later this year when it launches its inaugural men's ice hockey program and begins play as a member of the Collegiate Hockey Federation (CHF) for the 2022-23 season.

Hockey becomes the fifth sport in which Granite student-athletes can participate, along with men's basketball and baseball, co-ed cross country, and co-ed soccer.

As the first head coach of its men's hockey program, the Granite has tapped Kyle Robertson. His two decades of experience includes time behind the bench leading a number of regional junior teams and he's helped more than 100 players achieve their goal of playing in NCAA programs. Robertson will be assisted by longtime North Quincy High School varsity coach Matt Gibbons, whose tenure there includes three titles and MIAA Coach of the Year honors (he will continue in that role while serving as a Granite assistant).

"Planning for a men's hockey program has been ongoing for several years, and securing top-tier coaching was the final step in that process," said Jack Raymer, Quincy College's director of athletics. "Kyle and Matt both have outstanding player-evaluation and player-development skills as well as histories of on-ice success. With them in place, we've been ramping up student-athlete recruiting ahead of our long-awaited first season."

The Granite will compete in the CHF's New England Independent Hockey Conference whose member schools include Anna Maria College, Babson College, Farmingdale (NY) State College (Division III), Mass. Maritime Academy, New England College, Nichols College, Rhode Island College, Sacred Heart University, and the University of New Hampshire (Division III). The team will play its home games at Quincy Youth Arena.

Prospective students interested in the Quincy Granite men's hockey program – or any of the College's other athletics offerings can visit www.quincycollege.edu/athletics.

Work Begins on Stadium Wall Repairs

Mayor Thomas Koch announces restoration work will soon begin on the historic brick and granite wall surrounding Quincy's Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Sections of the 85-year-old wall will be rebuilt while other sections will see repointing and other structural reinforcement.

The wall was built during President Franklin Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration (WPA) program in the late-1930s. The signature brick and granite wall has become an aesthetic centerpiece of the Stadium's appearance and character.

The work will begin in June and likely last through the fall. A second phase of the project is being considered to restore the pedestrian bridge to Hancock Street from the home stands. Funding for the first phase of the project was approved through the Community Preservation Committee.

"Veterans' Stadium has already seen a substantial investment through our public/private partnership efforts and is now one of the finest municipal stadiums in the Commonwealth," said Mayor Koch. "We must continue to ensure that the facility is safe and maintains its character. I want to thank the Community Preservation Committee and the City Council for their support for this important restoration project."

Veterans' Stadium is home to both high schools' football, soccer (boys and girls), and lacrosse (boys and girls) programs. Youth soccer, youth lacrosse, and youth football also play home games at the Stadium. Major League Rugby's New England Free Jacks play their home games here, drawing teams from around the country and fans from around the globe. The Stadium is also home to many Recreation Department programs and community concerts. It was the former home of the Boston Cannons, the 2020 Major League Lacrosse Champions.

The Cannons upgraded the Stadium during their time at the facility. New locker rooms and brand new stadium seating were installed in 2019. A large video scoreboard was installed that is used by both Quincy and North Quincy high school programs during certain events.

Father Bill's/MainSpring Receives $11.2 Million From Rockland Trust

Rockland Trust has provided $11.2 million in financing to Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) for the construction of a new state of the art facility in Quincy that will include a day center with wraparound supports, 75 emergency shelter beds, plus 30 units of 100 percent affordable housing.

Rockland Trust will also be purchasing the federal and state tax credits associated with the project through a Fund managed by Massachusetts Housing Investment Corporation.

"Rockland Trust is honored to work with FBMS and the City of Quincy on the Yawkey Housing Resource Center," said John Quintal, first vice president, and Boston Lending Center manager at Rockland Trust. "We strongly believe in the innovative approach undertaken by FBMS to address the issue of homelessness."

"Rockland Trust is a critical partner in our work to make the Yawkey Housing Resource Center a reality," said John Yazwinski, president and CEO at Father Bill's & MainSpring. "We are grateful for their multifaceted commitment to our work — through financing, purchasing of tax credits, and a significant charitable contribution from their Foundation — which will better support individuals experiencing homelessness across the South Shore."

The City of Quincy acquired the land for the new project on FBMS' behalf and furnished the 99-year land lease. The multi-use facility will be located at 39 Broad St., directly across from the existing Father Bill's Place in Quincy. Once the project is complete, the existing location will be demolished to make way for a new police station, administrative offices for the fire department, and headquarters for emergency operations.

ness leaders like Rockland Trust, who are intentional about investing back into their communities through projects such as the Yawkey Housing Resource Center," said City Councillor Nina Liang. "When we are facing problems that affect all of us, it takes purposeful collaborations to address such serious needs. Their support of this project is critical in helping the most vulnerable individuals in our city find stability and work toward self-sufficiency."

Phase one of the FBMS

project entails the construction of the two-story 16,000 SF Housing Resource Center (HRC) building which, in addition to 75 shelter beds, will provide health-care, meal services, young adult services, education services, veteran services, and substance abuse treatment in collaboration with local community partners. Phase two of the project will be the construction of the apartment property featuring 30 affordable housing units for individuals transitioning out of HRC.

MA Rate Of Opioid-Related Overdose Deaths Increased 8.8 Percent In 2021

Fentanyl Continues As A Major Factor In Opioid-Related Deaths

The rate of opioid-related overdose deaths in Massachusetts increased by 8.8 percent in 2021 compared to 2020, according to preliminary data released last week by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH).

Drug overdose deaths in Massachusetts continue to trend lower than the nationwide figures. The rise in death rates reflects effects of the COVID-19 pandemic and an increasingly poisoned drug supply, primarily with the powerful synthetic opioid fentanyl.

There were 2,290 confirmed and estimated opioid-related overdose deaths in 2021, an estimated 185 more deaths than the prior year. Preliminary data from the first three months of 2022 show there were 551 confirmed and estimated opioid-related overdose deaths, a 4 percent decrease (an estimated 24 fewer deaths) than the same time last year.

Fentanyl remains a persistent factor in opioid-related overdose deaths in Massachusetts. Preliminary data show fentanyl was present at a rate of 93 percent where a toxicology report was available. The presence of fentanyl has increased about 1 percent per quarter since 2016, including in the pre-pandemic period from 2017 to 2019 when opioid-related overdose deaths in Massachusetts were on the decline.

The Baker-Polito Administration has invested millions of dollars to expand a wide range of harm reduction, substance use awareness, treatment intervention, and recovery services. The Administration's Fiscal Year 2023 (FY23) budget proposal invests $543.8 million in total funding for a wide range of harm reduction, treatment, and recovery programs that support individuals struggling with substance addiction and programs that work to prevent substance addiction through education, prescription monitoring, and more. This builds on the work done by the Administration and the Legislature to nearly quadruple state funding to tackle the addiction crisis since 2015.

"Tackling the opioid epidemic remains an urgent priority for our Administration, which is why we have worked with the Legislature to quadruple funding for substance addiction treatment and prevention, but we know there is more work to do," said Gov. Charlie Baker. "(The) report underscores the harmful impact that the COVID-19 pandemic and the scourge of fentanyl have had on those struggling with addiction, and we are committed to continuing our work with the Legislature and our colleagues in the addiction and recovery community to boost access to services and treatment."

"Over the past several years, our Administration has focused on addressing the opioid epidemic and the ways in which it intersects with the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic, by strengthening pathways to treatment and recovery services, and education and prevention tools," said Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito. "We will continue our comprehensive efforts while working with local public health officials to expand access to programs and services for those struggling with addiction."

In 2021, the opioid-related overdose death rate in Massachusetts increased to 32.6 per 100,000 people as compared to 29.9 per 100,000 in the prior year. When comparing 2021 to 2020, the opioid-related overdose death rate among race and ethnic groups as a whole or by gender remained relatively stable, with Black non-Hispanic and Asian/Pacific Islander populations seeing small decreases and white non-Hispanic and Hispanic populations seeing small increases. One exception is American Indian/Alaska Native residents. The 2021 opioid-related overdose death rate for American Indian/Alaska Native residents was 118.6 per 100,000. While this population accounts for a small number of opioid-related overdose deaths (13 out of 2,234 confirmed deaths), American Indian/Alaska Native residents statistically had the highest opioid-related overdose death rate among all race/ethnicity groups last year.

There is clear evidence that the COVID-19 pandemic has had a profound impact on mental health and has led to increased substance use across the Commonwealth. A preliminary analysis of DPH's CO-VID-19 Community Impact Survey, conducted to better understand the layered impacts of the pandemic, saw an increase in poor mental health and substance use since the pandemic began, especially among Black, Indigenous, people of color (BIPOC) and LGBTQ+ individuals.

"We continue to be relentless in our commitment to increase access to harm reduction services, low threshold housing and treatment," said Health and Human Services Secretary Marylou Sudders. "By working to destigmatize addiction and meeting people where they're at, including with an expanded array of harm reduction tools, we can reverse this negative trend."

"We recognize the disproportionate burden of the opioid epidemic on historically marginalized communities, which have also borne the brunt of the ongoing pandemic and its destabilizing impacts on mental health and substance use," said Public Health Commissioner Margaret Cooke. "We continue to use a data-driven approach to identify new solutions and expand on existing programs at the community level to increase much-needed outreach, especially among communities of color."

Since the start of the pandemic, the Administration has aggressively expanded existing substance use disorder treatment and overdose prevention initiatives, investing $120 million in prevention programs from fiscal years 2016 to 2022.

DPH has distributed more than 143,000 naloxone kits since March 2020 to opioid treatment programs, community health centers, hospital emergency departments, and houses of correction. Exemptions for federal requirements for take-home doses of medication for opioid use disorder have allowed 34 percent of Massachusetts opioid treatment program patients to access this life-saving treatment as of January 2022, compared to the pre-pandemic average of 16 percent in December 2019 (with a high of 52 percent in June 2020).

DPH has also expanded harm reduction programs as part of its overall overdose prevention efforts, including low-threshold housing (transitional and permanent), post-overdose support teams for overdose survivors, and mobile addiction services to improve access to treatment for individuals.

After fentanyl, cocaine continues to be the next most prevalent drug among opioid-related overdose deaths, present in toxicology reports at a rate of 51 percent in 2021 — a 5 percent increase over 2020. Benzodiazepines were present in 31 percent of opioid-related fatal overdoses. The percentage of benzodiazepines has been declining since the last quarter of 2017.

Alcohol, a newly reported toxicology data point, was present in 29 percent of opioid-related overdose deaths. This was followed by prescription opioids in 13 percent, and heroin or likely heroin and amphetamines present in 10 percent. The rate of heroin or likely heroin present in opioid-related overdose deaths has been declining since 2014.

Among the other findings of the latest opioid report:

- The confirmed opioid-related overdose death rate for all Black non-Hispanic residents fell from 37.5 to 35.1 per 100,000 between 2020 and 2021. The death rate for Asian/Pacific Islander non-Hispanic residents was relatively constant, going from 3.4 per 100,000 in 2020 to 3.3 per 100,000 in 2021.

- Both white non-Hispanic and Hispanic residents experienced death rate increases, with white non-Hispanic rates rising from 33.8 to 35.9 per 100,000 and Hispanic rates from 35.4 to 38 per 100,000 between 2020 and 2021.

- Males comprise 73 percent of all opioid-related overdose deaths occurring in 2021.

- 50 percent of opioid-related deaths occurred in people who were between 25 and 44 years old, compared to 5 percent of all deaths

- 41 percent were between 45 and 64 years old, compared to 17 percent of all deaths

- In 2021, males ages 25-34 once again represented the greatest number, accounting for 21 percent of suspected opioid-related incidents with a known age and sex treated by Emergency Medical Services (EMS).

- Naloxone was administered in 96 percent of acute opioid overdoses occurring in 2021. Of all opioid-related EMS incidents in 2021, 55.3 percent were categorized as acute opioid overdoses.

Rep. Ayers Presents Citation To Quincy Firefighter Who Saved Girls From Drowning

State Rep. Bruce Ayers recently presented a citation to Quincy firefighter John Coughlin.

A resident of Squantum, Coughlin was off-duty when he saved three young girls from drowning after they got caught in a microburst storm off of Orchard Beach towards the end of last summer.

The girls, two of whom are students at Central Middle School, were kayaking in late August of 2021 when the wind picked up. The strong tides swept them out from the coast into rough waters, where they began calling for help.

Coughlin, who lives nearby, saw it happen and reacted swiftly. He went out in his rowboat, and pulled all three girls to safety.

Ayers presented Coughlin with the House citation to recognize his bravery and quick action.

"John's fast thinking during an unexpected microburst storm is commendable," Ayers said. "John is a dedicated public servant, and in true fashion is humble when it comes to recounting the story. But by accounts from the girls and their parents, he rescued these kids from a very dangerous situation."

Coughlin, a veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, previously spent five summers as a lifeguard on Wollaston Beach in his 20s. He had a previous rescue back then as well.

GM Batteries, Resetting Oil Change Light, Fuel Smell

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor Senior Manager, Public Affairs and Traffic Safety

Any word on when GM will start replacing recalled batteries in the Chevy Bolts? They announced the recall about 10 months ago. No worry to us the buyer, except to not park within 50 feet of anything.

I was on a call a few weeks ago and was told that GM has a fix for the battery issue and will update/replace batteries as they become available. Also back in December, there was a software update that was designed to minimize issues with the battery that could come from overcharging. For the latest information go to www.chevrolet.com/electric/bolt-recall

I have recently retired and haven't driven my 2014 Ford Flex as much as I used to. In fact, it only has 40,000 miles on it. Should I switch to synthetic oil on my next oil change? I do plan on taking a road trip in the near future. I do go out and start it at least once a month and every time I do it says it needs an oil change.

More than likely your Ford Flex is using Motorcraft 5w-20 (WSS-M2C945-A) semi synthetic oil. Switching to a fully synthetic oil will not present any issues and may add an addition layer of protection to the engine. Regarding starting the engine once a month and letting it run is not a great idea. You and your car would be much better off with driving the car every two weeks for about 30 minutes. This will help keep the battery fully charged, remove any accumulated rust on the brakes and "exercise" the moving parts of the vehicle. Before taking any extended road trips have a trusted repair shop check out the cars looking for potential issues that could come up on an extended road trip

I live in Egypt, and I read your column online. I have a 2016 Subaru Crosstrek and asked about changing the gear oil. The service person in Egypt said there is no need it is a lifetime fluid. Is that true?

The service person is correct; there are periodic checks to the fluid but no specific change interval. The only time that would vary is if the car routinely tows a trailer or is used as a commercial vehicle such as delivery or Uber/Lyft.

I read your column every week. While most of what you provide doesn't pertain to my truck, it is interesting to see just what is going on out there. Recently, while in Florida, I saw a car which, when the brakes were applied, the brake lights flashed three times and they stayed on while the driver's foot was on the brake. I thought this was a great way to catch any following driver's attention. I have asked around at auto parts stores to see if they know of this feature. They all have said that it must be specific to the car. Unfortunately, I did not get the make of the car when I saw it. I was wondering if you knew which make of car has this feature and if the switch or whatever it is that provides this flashing light is available to be installed on a 2021 GMC Canyon.

The flashing brake light is a kit that can be ordered online, but technically it is illegal in the United States. The system is used in Europe and from what I have read was pilot tested in the US on some Mercedes models. Currently the FMVSS (Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards) call for the brake lights to be steady burning when the brakes are applied. You may have seen this setup in Florida since there is no annual vehicle inspection.

I have a 2017 Toyota Avalon with only 8,500 miles on it. I have had three oil changes, the last done in 2021 with 5,000 miles. The car is only used in town and is garaged. Do I need to change the oil and if so, how often if I switch to synthetic oil?

Conventional oil or synthetic oil the oil needs to be changed at least once per year. Short distance driving can still contaminate engine oil and changing it yearly and checking the vital fluid once per year is money well spent.

I have a most unusual mechanical problem with my 2002 Ford F350 diesel pickup truck. Every time I drive on I-91 through Springfield, Massachusetts and a few other seemingly haunted places across the country the truck sputters, bucks and nearly conks out. Actually, it has conked out a few times, but after getting towed back to my home in Windsor, CT or a local garage it miraculously seems to come back to life. I have spent hundreds if not thousands of dollars trying to figure out the problem and am feeling like I might need an exorcist not a mechanic. Yes, I have changed the cam sensor, all the fuel filters, injectors, full tune up and the truck otherwise runs like a top. One little clue is that it seems to happen when I am near high energy transfer stations or cell phone towers. I know it sounds crazy, in fact my mechanic did not believe me until I drove him to one of the "special" places that the truck gives me trouble and on que the truck started to buck and sputter like it was possessed by a demon. I'm curious as to your thoughts on this strange and frustrating mechanical puzzle.

The camshaft position sensor is the one item that has caused the most problems with this truck. I have found in this case it is best to use only a Ford part, rather than an aftermarket sensor. The other odd characteristic is (at least according to technical forums) is that the engine will stall or buck when the windshield wipers are on, when an aftermarket sensor is used. Before I call an exorcist, I would also do a series of voltage drop tests looking for poor power and ground connections.

I have a 1992 Camaro Z-28, 5.7 L automatic. For the past several years, I've been having a strange issue with shifting. When you start driving, it just doesn't really want to shift up into the second gear. It feels like it has a governor on it that is retarding the speed. After about a quarter mile, you feel it shift up. After that, there are no issues with shifting. I can turn it off, let it set for a few hours, and there still is no issue. This only happens if the car has been setting around for a few days. I had the transmission fluid and filter changed, but that didn't help. The local Chevy dealer said they couldn't replicate the problem. One individual said it could be the speed sensor, but I've had them fail before and this doesn't feel like that. Another individual said that there could be an issue with the ECM (computer). I did a little internet investigation, and it could be. Any suggestions?

There are many possibilities and in my opinion the computer is the least likely of the shifting issue. Some possibilities are the governor valve is sticking, or the drive gear is damaged, the 1-2 shift valve is sticking in the valve body, and the 2-4 servo passages are partially clogged.

I do not think that electric vehicles are practical for many folks not living in cities or that drive a long ways. My wife drives 45 minutes each way to work. There is no way the employer of a small business will ever install charging stations for employees. I drive almost 3 hours to work one way. Then after work I drive an hour to my mother's house where I stay when working. Currently we drive gas cars that get depending on the car, 18 to just over 40 miles per gallon. I drive slower than most folks to maximize my vehicle fuel economy. Your thoughts?

Electric cars are not for everyone or at least not yet. Today most electric cars have a 200-250-mile range and a few have even longer range. About 80 percent of EV owners charge at home and the 200-mile range works for many of these owners. We are seeing more and more public charging stations be installed and someday EV charging stations may be as common as parking meters. Additionally, the cost of electric vehicles will go down as popularity increases.

JOHN PAUL

Last summer I leased a 2021 Mazda CX-5. I like the design and how it drives, but after 5,000 miles I started hearing this odd whistling sound. It only happens when the turn signal is on, and I turn the steering wheel the slightest bit in the opposite direction of the turn signal. It also only happens the first instance the wheel is turned within each use of the turn signal and continues any time I engage the turn signal. It's not overly loud but passengers can hear it if it's quiet in the car. I took the car to the dealer for service, and they weren't sure what it was but wanted to replace the turn signal. It took about six weeks to get the part, citing delays in getting parts these days. I'm trying to schedule an appointment for the repair but am not entirely convinced this will solve the problem. While waiting for the part, I searched the internet to see if others had this problem. It is not uncommon, and unfortunately many who experienced this still do not have a fix. Given how long it takes to get parts, I'd rather not have this problem continue for the duration of the lease. Any thoughts?

Unlike the "old-days" where there was a turn signal flasher that also made a clicking sound the turn signal in your car is quite sophisticated. When the turn signal lever is pushed, the instrument cluster receives a turn signal warning indicator signal via the CAN BUS (controller area network) communication from the front body control module. Then the instrument cluster turns the transistor on based on the turn signal/hazard warning indicator signal. When the transistor turns on, a ground circuit with the turn and hazard indicator alarm is established and the turn and hazard indicator alarm is activated. A failing transistor can even make a "white-noise." At this point you will need to let the dealer sort this issue out.

Say I buy an electric car and run out of power on the road. Can AAA rescue me, or will I need a tow to a charger?

We have seen very few cases of EV owners who have run out of power. This is most likely due to the fact that many EV owners who charge at home start the day with a fully charged battery. As opposed to the typical gasoline fuel vehicle that is driving around with less than half a tank of fuel. In fact, many people drive until the low fuel light comes on (not healthy for the fuel pump). Currently in most areas we will tow an electric car to the nearest charging station or home to recharge. We are also pilot testing mobile electric vehicle charging throughout AAA Northeast's territory.

My old Honda Accord will drive fine then will randomly shake and vibrate as if someone is rocking the car slow down goes away for a while and will randomly shake again. Shaking feels like it's coming from the rear. Nothing is felt through the steering wheel. Any ideas?

I would perform a close inspection of the rear suspension looking for worn components. More than likely it is a combination of worn suspension components, worn shocks/struts and out of balance tires. As you hit a bump it causes the tires to shake. The other occasional and weird issue is from time to time when airing up a flat tire the air compressor will add just enough water to the tires to throw them out of balance.

I just changed the oil on my Toyota Corolla because the reminder light was on. The oil is full, but the light is still on. How do I reset it? The parts place where I bought the oil and filter said I need a special tool to reset the light. Really?

No special tools required. The first step is to turn the "ENGINE START STOP" switch or engine switch OFF with the trip meter A reading shown. The second step is while pressing the trip meter reset button, turn the "ENGINE START STOP" switch or engine switch ON. Finally

Drive Slower, 'Look Twice To Save A Life,' Wear A Seatbelt

Reminders Being Issued By MassDOT, EOPSS, State Police, Transportation Partners

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT), Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety and Security (EOPSS), Massachusetts State Police (MSP), law enforcement and transportation partners hosted a safety event June 7th due to an alarming rise in roadway fatalities.

Roadway fatalities in Massachusetts and across the nation increased in calendar year 2021, a year when traffic volume was still not at levels seen before the pandemic. In 2021, Massachusetts had more than 400 roadway deaths—the highest amount in more than 11 years and 22% higher than in 2020. Preliminary numbers for 2022 show an increase in roadway deaths compared with the same period in 2021.

As the summer travel season begins and more people are bicycling and walking due to warmer weather, officials today urged everyone to pay attention and think safety. Deaths and injuries due to crashes are preventable if drivers and members of the public exercise caution: use crosswalks, signal when turning, wear a helmet, wear a seatbelt, travel on trips with your phone put away, drive sober and limit distractions in vehicles.

• Motorcyclists: Motorcyclist deaths are at a 25-year high. MassDOT urges drivers to "look twice, save a life" and check for motorcyclists while sharing the road. Motorcyclists must also be vigilant; in 2021, 41% of motorcycle fatal crashes were single-motorcycle crashes. Motorcyclists are urged to take a training course through the state-sponsored Rider Education Program (MREP) to increase rider skills and safety on the road.

• Seatbelts: Wearing a seatbelt as a front-seat passenger can limit your chances of moderate to fatal injury by 50% and limit your chances of dying by 45%. Wear your seatbelt—it could save your life. Drivers tell your passengers they must wear a seat belt.

• Pedestrians: Pedestrian deaths, particularly of older pedestrians, are significantly increased. Drivers are urged to slow down and "Scan the Street for Wheels and Feet" to be mindful of pedestrians and bicyclists on the roadways. Speed matters; each

1 mph increase that a person drives can be attributed to a 3% increase in potential loss of life. When a driver in a car traveling at 20 mph strikes a pedestrian, there is a 13% probability of a fatal or serious injury for the pedestrian; however that probability increases to 40% at 30 mph, and 73% at 40 mph.

• Distracted driving: In the United States, about eight people die daily due to car crashes involving a distracted driver. Governor Charlie Baker signed the Hands-Free Law in November of 2019 and it took effect in February of 2020 to curb distracted driving—making it illegal to operate a motor vehicle with electronic devices while driving unless the technology is being used hands-free.

• Young drivers: Young drivers are at a higher risk for crashes and dangerous driving, and the probability of crashes increases significantly when teens drive with other teens. MassDOT encourages parents to be good role models, talk to teens about safety, and support young people as they are learning to drive and after receiving their license.

MassDOT is taking several actions to increase roadway safety and work toward achieving zero deaths on roadways:

• Safe System Approach: MassDOT is adopting the Safe System Approach toward achieving zero deaths on our roadways. A safe system encourages safe roads, safer road users, safe vehicles, post-crash care, and safe speeds.

• Investing in bicycle-friendly roadways: Massachusetts was ranked # 1 for the first time by a non-profit which issues a yearly report card. The League of American Bicyclists 2022 report card gave Massachusetts the grade of "A" in the categories: Infrastructure & Funding, Education & Encouragement, and Policies & Programs. MassDOT is increasing investments and projects dedicated to building sidewalks, bicycle facilities, safe crossings, etc. MassDOT has increased funding to municipal grant programs to support communities in building infrastructure to keep people safe whether they are walking, bicycling or taking public transportation.

• Speed Management policy: MassDOT has a robust Speed Management Policy and "Safe Speeds" website, which was released this year as guidance to communities in the Commonwealth. These resources are provided to municipalities with information on speed management and opportunities to seek grant funding to implement speed control measures.

• Establishing target speeds: The state has been working to establish target speeds. With input from city and town officials and MassDOT partners, conversations are taking place to determine what the safe speed should be for certain roadways.

MassDOT and its partners continue to urge the traveling public to use state roadways and infrastructure safely.

continue to press and hold the button until the trip meter displays 000000.

My 20-year-old Dodge with a V-6 engine has a fuel smell. I have looked for leaks and can't find any and the car still gets the same mileage, also no check engine light. What do you think it can be?

If you can find a shop with an exhaust gas analyzer, the tailpipe probe makes a very good sniffer. The leak could be a saturated carbon canister, which is part of the evaporative emissions system, leaking gas tank or fuel fill. A clue may be the lack of a check engine light on. One area that will cause a fuel smell and not trigger a check engine light is a faulty/leaking fuel rail. This part delivers fuel to the fuel injectors, if it is seeping fuel the car will run okay but will produce a fuel smell. Fuel leaks are serious and could potentially cause a fire, get the car check as soon as possible.

This is hardly a technical question, but I purchased a new car for the first time in 20 years and it has a key-fob to lock and unlock the doors and button to start the car. How long can I expect the battery in my remote key fob to last? My second question: if I start the car and leave the fob home how long I can drive the car. The car dealer said about 20 miles then I will get a warning. Is that true?

Based on my own experiences I would say a key-fob remote battery will last five years or so, although I have had some last much longer. The only time I have seen shorter life is when the button is held down for a longer period. This could be if the fob is in a purse, bag or even in a pocket. Replacing a fob battery is simple and inexpensive and as a preventative measure you could replace it every four-five years. Also keep in mind nearly every car with pushbutton start and a key-fob has a key built into the fob in case of emergencies. Unless there is something very unique about your car, if you start it, then leave the fob home it will run until you shut it off or it runs out of fuel.

I have a 2019 Toyota Camry with about 38,000 miles on it, that is coming off the lease and I can buy it for about $17,000. Do you think this is a good idea? The car has been very good and only needed regular maintenance.

Looking online with today's crazy used car prices (up 30 percent over last year) the typical 2019 Camry is selling for $25,000. To me this makes buying out your lease a "no-brainer." Of course, you may need to put some money into the car. At its age and mileage, you may be due to for tires, brake replacement and maybe a new battery. With a thorough detailing and if needed, replacing tires, brakes and the battery would be money well spent and make the car feel and look like new again.

My 20-year-old twin boys want to drive cross country this summer. The problem that they want to do it in their grandfather's 20-year-old Lexus. What do you think of this idea?

The three most common reasons people call AAA are keys locked in the car, dead batteries and flat tires. If I was to do this trip, I would bring the car to a good garage for an overall checkup focusing on parts that age. This would be drive belts, cooling system, tires, and the electrical system. I would also look at brakes, steering and suspension components and fuel and brake lines. I would also carry an emergency kit of premixed coolant, extra oil and transmission fluid, first aid kit, portable air compressor and jump-pack, if everything is repaired or looks okay the trip is certainly possible and safe. Although keep in mind that AAA surveys show that cars 10 years and older are twice as likely to break-down and four times as likely to need a tow than newer vehicles. But what is life without an adventure.

I have a GMC 2500HD pickup that is used for work, I'm a handy-man and some days have no weight in the truck and other times may have an entire deck. The door sticker states the front tires should be at 65 PSI and the rear tires should be inflated to 75 PSI. I just had an oil change and asked to have the tires checked. When I checked with both the tire monitors and a gauge and they are all at around 63 PSI. Should I set the tires at different levels?

I believe in setting vehicle tires at the pressure recommended by the vehicle manufacturer, in this case 65 PSI in the front and 75 PSI in the rear. The only time I would vary the pressure is if you were carrying a heavy load for a long distance and then add more air, but never exceed the maximum tire inflation pressure on the tire's sidewall.

I have a 2015 Nissan Rogue with 56,000 miles on it. This car ran great until I was involved in a car wreck. Now frequently, when shifting into park, the engine will jump up to as high as 4,000 rpm - as though I floored the accelerator - then the engine settles down to normal. This does not happen every time I shift into park but very unnerving when it happens. Is this a major concern? The body shop took the car to the dealer and they replaced the accelerator pedal and performed throttle learn. The problem is the same thing still happens but now accompanied with vibrating noise coming from engine when accelerating up to 40 mph. What can I do?

I have checked for possible technical service bulletins, and none were found. At this point more diagnostic time is going to be needed. I suspect the issue may be due to the previous body repair. It is possible that a wiring harness was poorly installed or poor chassis ground could be the problem. The vibration you hear could be that the exhaust heat shield has started to loosen up and vibrated and rattles due to the engine revving. At this point a good technician is going to need to take time with additional testing. Depending on long it has been since the body repair, the insurance company may be able to open up an additional claim based on the first repair.

I have a new 2022 Honda Pilot with only 4,000 miles on it. When I come to a stop, I get a message that reads "AUTO ENGINE IDLE STOP UNAVAILABLE." The dealer did not find a code for this message. Any thoughts on this and the Pilot in general?

Since the pandemic and more people working at home some vehicles such as yours are not being driven as much as others. Certain parameters need to be met, engine temperature, seat belts on and shifter in drive normal mode, not sport or manual gear selection etc. Also important is the battery needs to be fully charged. If the battery voltage is low, it may still be able to start the engine, but will limit the "Auto-Stop" feature. With the vehicle being new and such low mileage, it is possible the battery is not fully charged. The first thing to do would be fully charge the battery at a slow rate with a battery charger. Regarding the Honda Pilot, in spite of a few problems over the years with oil consumption it is still one of my favorite SUVs.

$53 Million Bond Sought For Quincy Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday began reviewing a proposed $53 million bond for improvements in Quincy Center, nearly half of which would go towards land acquisitions and related costs.

Mayor Thomas Koch is seeking approval to borrow an additional $53 million for the downtown through district-improvement-financing (DIF), which allows the city to pay back the bond using new tax revenue created in Quincy Center. The council's finance committee held its first hearing on the request on Monday and councillors are likely to take it up again on June 21, their final meeting before recessing for the summer.

The bond pending before the council would be the fourth DIF bond used for the redevelopment of Quincy Center. The first $40 million bond, approved in 2007, largely went toward the construction of the Hannon Parkway; an $80 million bond approved in 2017 was used for construction of the new 700-car garage on the Hancock Lot and related costs; and a $61 million bond approved in 2019 paid for environmental cleanup of the Ross Lot and costs associated with the Generals Bridge and Generals Park (the state picked up the $13 million tab for constructing the bridge.)

Chris Walker, Koch's chief of staff, said the progress that has happened so far in Quincy Center has arisen from a true partnership between the mayor and the City Council.

"This has been, going back more than a decade now, a true partnership and this body deserves a lot of credit for that. There was a time when you would be in this room deliberating, discussing downtown issues, and it was about 'what if,' 'what could,' 'what may be.' Tonight, we are here talking about what is," Walker said.

"The progress that has been made in downtown working with this body in partnership with Mayor Koch, our state legislative delegation and the governor's office is real. It is tangible, it exists, you can see it."

The proposed $53 million bond includes $17 million for acquiring four parcels of land. They are 1455, 1459 and 1620 Hancock St. — all of which Koch has asked the council to take by eminent domain — and 119 Parkway, which Walker said is likely to be acquired without an eminent domain taking.

The building at 1455 Hancock St. is currently home to a Tae Kwon Do studio while the building next door at 1459 Hancock St. is home to a coffee shop, among other businesses. Those two would be purchased and razed to create civic space between two proposed mixed-use buildings on either side.

The building at 1620 Hancock St. was home to Taso's Pizza and Euro Cafe but has sat vacant since an April 2001 fire. The city plans to acquire that building and flip it to a developer.

The building at 119 Parkway is currently home to IHOP and is owned by LBC Boston, one of the developers of the former Hancock Lot. The Parkway building would be acquired to provide land for a new municipal parking garage that will be located in that area.

In addition to the $17 million to acquire those four parcels, the proposed bond also includes $3.25 million to relocate the tenants of those buildings and $4.5 million to demolish the buildings. Those bring the total costs of four land acquisitions to $24.75 million.

The bond also includes $2.9 million for environmental pre-characterization and soil management; $5.175 million for subsurface utility improvements; $12.75 million for surface utility improvements, including creating the new civic space at 1455 and 1459 Hancock St., civic space enhancements at the intersection of Hancock and Elm streets, and realignment of the intersection of Hannon Parkway and McConville Way (the state will contribute $2.3 million to that project); and $7.425 million for 36 months of fees for consultants and legal services.

Craig Seymour of RKG Associates, a consultant to the city, said there would be enough new tax revenue generated in Quincy Center to pay the debt service for the proposed bond and the other bonds approved before it.

"We have taken, over the years, a very conservative approach to the estimates we use and the assumptions," Seymour said. "We are very confident moving forward that there is adequate funds to continue this process."

Seymour later noted the model used by his firm does not include any projected property tax revenue associated with FoxRock Properties' planned medical office building on the former Ross Lot. Walker said the city's agreement with FoxRock exempted the company from property tax payments, given the use of the site, but said the developer is in negotiations with the mayor to make payments to the city in lieu of taxes.

FoxRock, as part of its development, plans to construct a 514-car garage on site. The city is also planning to construct a new garage to the south of the Generals Bridge. Money to design the garage was included in the DIF bond that was authorized in 2019.

Rob Stevens, the city's deputy planning director, said that the size of the new garage has yet to be determined but it could contain between 1,000 and 1,500 spaces. The final size will depend in part on the parking needs of other developments in the area, he said.

Walker said the city expects outside funding — from the state or federal government — would pay all or most of the cost to construct the new garage. The city has received $68.5 million from the state and federal governments to date for Quincy Center, Stevens said, and the state has authorized an additional $40 million in funding through the I-Cubed program.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said he was concerned the size of the new garage has yet to be determined and the city's parking consultant has yet to complete its report on parking needs in the area.

"[It's] a little troubling that in times past whenever we voted on funding for parking there was a report that went along with it — we're being asked for funding now but we're not far enough along to generate a report to support the funding request," Palmucci said.

Walker later stated the bond request includes little to no money for the garage. Palmucci responded that he knew there was no money for the garage in the bond, but it does include money for items related to it.

Councillor Nina Liang asked if there was an item within the bond request to allow the city to share information about the development efforts with area residents and businesses.

"Is there a plan for communications and if so, what category would that be under? If there isn't one, I would respectfully ask that we create a communications plan with interpretations and ADA compliance included in that," Liang said.

Stevens said the consulting section of the bond includes funds for communications. Walker said officials are working on a communications plan for the latest round of work.

"We are in a little bit of an interim phase right now, there's not a ton implicating existing businesses right this second, but that time is shortly coming up," Walker said. "We know full well that we're going to be implementing a full-throated communication plan as we did previously."

Liang requested a breakdown of the fees that would be paid to consultants out of the new bond request. She likewise asked for a breakdown on how all the DIF money has been spent to date — councillors were provided a breakdown of how the third DIF bond has been used — as well as a report on how the state and federal grants have been used.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan Jr. noted there are now people living in Quincy Center and said it would be important to keep them informed of what is happening in the area.

"I would also like to remind everyone that there are now neighborhoods downtown," he said. "Communication down there on what's going on is going to be key, because you're going to be shutting off people's power, you're going to be doing different things, and there is a whole neighborhood living down there."

Councillor Anne Mahoney asked why the administration did not seek to take the building at 1620 Hancock St., the former pizzeria, sooner.

"It's an unfortunate thing. That building has been burnt-out for 20 years," Mahoney said. "We let it sit there for 20 years, a burnt-out building, and we're probably going to pay top dollar for it and when we turn it around and we sell it to developers, we never get that top dollar back."

"It's very frustrating to the taxpayers of the city of Quincy."

Stevens said city is looking to take that property now because the building next door, currently home to a health foods store, had been put on the market.

"We haven't heard whether they've made a decision or not, but we think development in that block is likely," Stevens said.

Council President Noel DiBona asked the deputy planning director how far along the city is in redeveloping Quincy Center.

In the area of the former Hancock Lot, Stevens said the effort is 75 or 80 percent complete, with two developments completed, a third recently permitted, and others in the area still on the horizon, including a new courthouse and the East of Chestnut project, plus a fourth on the former parking lot itself. In the Ross Lot area, development is about 25 to 50 percent complete, Stevens said, with FoxRock awaiting permission from the MBTA before it begins work on its development there.

DiBona said he was optimistic about the future of Quincy Center.

"I'm glad you guys are here at the table trying to move the city forward in the right direction. I'm very optimistic things are going to move in the right direction," DiBona said.

"You can't leave it just sitting there. I remember... when I came on the council in 2016, it was like a bomb went off out there and West of Chestnut was the only one being kind of constructed, and then, parcel by parcel, it moved along, and here we are in 2022."

Joseph W. Wong, 72

Joseph Wai-Man Wong passed away at his home on June 11, 2022 at the age of 72.

Joe was born in Nanjing, China, but spent his formative years in Hong Kong. He arrived in Boston's Chinatown in 1982 and married Poh Gaik Goh in 1988. They moved and settled in Quincy, MA in 1993.

Like many immigrants before and after his arrival to the United States, Joe worked long, hard hours. For many years, he worked in Chinese restaurants up and down the North and South Shores. Later on, he transitioned to factory and assembly work. Prior to his retirement in 2016, he spent 13 years at the Quincy Wal-Mart where he greeted customers coming in and out of the store. He always had a smile on and was a regular fixture for all customers.

Joe was a longtime member of the Episcopal Boston Chinese Ministry at St. Paul's Cathedral in Boston, MA. He enjoyed catching up on current affairs at home and abroad. He enjoyed venturing into Chinatown to enjoy some breakfast and his newspapers.

What's Happening On Wollaston Beach? Friends Update

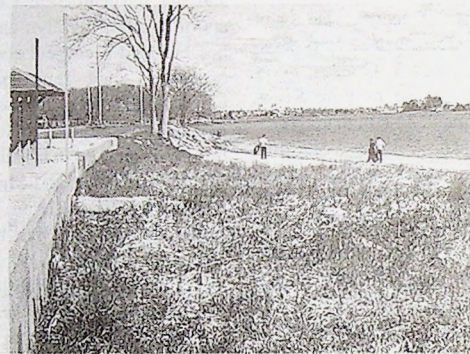

The Friends of Wollaston Beach had two amazing cleanups recently. Park Serve Day focused on the north end of the beach, while Cleaner/Greener focused on Caddy Park at the south end of the beach.

Cleaner/Greener was particularly challenging due to the high winds and bitter cold.

"We are so grateful to the 30-plus people who came through for us," said president Maureen Mazrimas. "Particularly helpful is the support received from the cadets of the North Quincy High School Jr. ROTC program and their leader, M.Sgt. John Delorenzo. They have had our back for at least the last decade. We are also pleased to have had assistance from two cadets from Mass. Maritime. With the help of these young men and women, I think our future is in good hands."

In gratitude for the unwavering support from North Quincy High School Jr. ROTC, the Friends of Wollaston Beach initiated a $500 scholarship this year, presented at their recent banquet. FWB intends to make this an annual tradition.

FWB is currently working to bring back some of its traditional activities such as movies at the Tot Lot. Details are still in the planning stages. Please look for specifics in the Sun.

FWB's signature event – Kids' Fest – has been set for Sunday, Sept. 4 from 1 to 4 p.m. Kids of all ages enjoy inflatables, games, contests, DJ, dancing, face painting, and glitter tattoos. In addition, each child receives a beach-related item such as a beach ball, pail and shovel, frisbee, kite, etc., and a coloring book on marine habit, fish, and the like. Save the Harbor/Save the Bay also provides fun-filled educational offerings and programs from the Boston Circus Guild.

"It's a great event! We look forward to seeing you back at the beach," said

Mazrimas.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Information you need might be coming in sporadically, but at least what you're getting is valuable. Continue to wait until more is available before acting on that career move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue on an upbeat cycle, and with that strong Taurean energy you should see favorable results from your hard work. A pleasant surprise awaits you in your private life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding needs more time to be worked out. Don't give up on it just yet. Remain open to providing explanations, if called for. Another friend offers good advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Fast action can correct a seemingly minor problem that has taken on some unexpectedly difficult aspects. Stay with it until it's resolved. News on a more positive note is due soon.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some snags could cause delays in those plans you're eager to see put into operation. But be patient. The Clever Cat will soon have good reason to celebrate a job well done.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let that Virgin sensitivity dissuade you from being the hardheaded realist you should be at this time. Your goals are in sight. Stay focused on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive aspect opens up, allowing you to make some important changes in a personal situation. Remember to seek balance and avoid extremes as you proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good week to get out and enjoy the fine times you missed while you were so deep in those workaday projects. Be sure to share it with that special person.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Work and play are in balance this week. However, expect news that could tip things toward the workplace for quite a while. But all to a good end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're more productive on the job than you have been in some time. That's good. But be careful not to overlook some situations developing in your private life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been doing a lot for others (as usual). But now it's time to focus on your needs, including finally going on that long-delayed trip you've been hoping to make.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's all smoothly going on 'twixt you and that very special person in your life. But a colleague causes some disruption on the job that you might be called on to help settle.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to the needs of others. But you're no push-over. You would make a fine teacher, psychologist or minister.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Becoming Elvis Presley landed Austin Butler in a hospital. To become “The King” for his movie role, Butler immersed himself in everything Elvis, and his body went into overdrive. Even when production shut down due to Tom Hanks testing positive for COVID, he continued his character study. Butler revealed, “The day after we wrapped, I woke at 4 a.m. with excruciating pain and was diagnosed with a virus that simulates appendicitis that hospitalized me for a week.”

He attributes his collapse to living, breathing and doing everything Elvis to build his portrayal. The usually jaded audience at the Cannes Film Festival gave the film a 12-minute standing ovation, and when Butler recreated some of Presley’s greatest hits – including “Jailhouse Rock,” “Blue Suede Shoes” and “Suspicious Minds” – the audience went wild. Then when Priscilla Presley (Elvis’ former wife) hugged him, the audience broke out in spontaneous applause yet again. “Elvis” opens in theaters Friday, June 24.

Little known fact: When Butler appeared on Broadway in “The Iceman Cometh,” starring Denzel Washington, his dedication to the role and the play impressed Denzel so much that he started coaching him, and unbeknownst to Butler, Denzel called Baz Luhrmann (who he’d never met and didn’t know) and sang the praises of his cast member. Butler admits, “Denzel didn’t call me beforehand, he didn’t call me afterward; it was just this generous thing he did!”

Rob Reiner, who recently announced he’s making a sequel to “This Is Spinal Tap” (40 years after its original premiere), was shocked when he heard he’s been banned from Russia forever by Vladimir Putin because of a video he made in 2016 condemning Russia’s meddling in our 2016 election. Reiner is in good company, because Putin also has banished President Joe Biden, Vice President Kamala Harris and former first lady Hillary Clinton, as well as Morgan Freeman (who narrated the video) and Facebook’s Mark Zuckerberg. Reiner, not to let Putin have the last word, retorted, “I’ve no comment, except to say that I’m heartbroken and will have to live with the disappointment!”

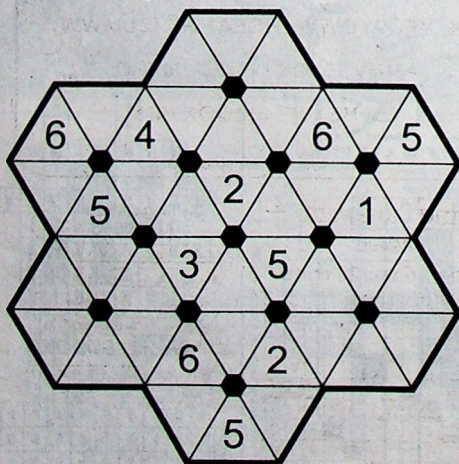

Sharon Stone, who played a villain in “Catwoman” (which starred Halle Berry in the title role), will again play a villain in the upcoming Warners/DC film “Blue Beetle,” due August 2023. Stone’s career has had a lot of ups and downs: “Basic Instinct” (1992) made her a star, and “Casino” (1995) earned her an Oscar nomination. But “Catwoman” bombed, as did the sequel to “Basic Instinct” in 2004. While awaiting release of “What About Love,” with Andy Garcia, she’s currently in TV ads for Slotomania, a game you can download for free but eventually wind up paying through the nose for. Caution: Don’t get stung by Captain Slotostar, aka Sharon Stone!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Horner Chest of Drawers – Victorian furniture was larger, heavier and usually darker and much more ornate than the mid-century or even modern pieces used today. The houses were large and dark. The electric light was not invented until about 1805, and the candles and oil lamps used for light could only illuminate a small area.

Big carvings could be seen, dark wood covered some of the flaws and wealthy homeowners who bought the expensive furniture had large homes with big rooms, and the furniture was styled to show off the size and wealth. The best furniture makers and designers in New York favored George Hunzinger, who came from Germany in 1855. He made unusual furniture that had wooden parts that looked like lollipops and plumbing parts. Many chairs folded up. He patented over 20 designs.

Another star was the firm Kimbel and Cabus. These New Yorkers started in 1862. They created modern gothic style, much simpler than the earlier renaissance gothic and an Anglo-Japanese look. They used tiles, painted sections and metal trim.

A third totally different type of furniture was made by Robert Horner in 1886. Walnut wood was scarce, so he used oak or mahogany to make heavy furniture with large carvings of gargoyles and cherubs and trim. Several other furniture makers made similar furniture that collectors may attribute to the wrong maker. A Cowan auction sold a five-drawer Horner chest of drawers. It had faux bamboo trim on the drawers and a side lock. The bamboo pole at the side is made to slide over part of the drawer to keep the drawers shut and locked. It sold for $1,088.

Q: I love McCoy pottery and for years have had a green McCoy letter holder hanging on the wall near my front door. Is it rare?

A: The McCoy Pottery Company was based in Zanesville, Ohio, and from 1910 to 1990, produced huge numbers of planters, bowls, serving dishes, wall pockets, cookie jars and your letter holder. The pottery is still an inexpensive and colorful collectible. McCoy pottery is very functional, including your letter holder, which is selling for around $45 in antique stores.

Massage in for five minutes, and rinse thoroughly.

Q: I saw that JoJo Fletcher from "The Bachelorette" finally married Aaron Rodgers' brother. I didn't see any pictures of Aaron though. Was he at the wedding? — D.E.

A: No, NFL star quarterback Aaron Rodgers did not attend brother Jordan's wedding in May. Reportedly, Aaron has been estranged from his family for several years now. Jordan did invite him to the nuptials, but he didn't attend. Back in November 2021, father Ed Rodgers told the media that "things are progressing" in his relationship with Aaron, but gave no further details.

On "The Bachelorette" in 2016, when JoJo went to visit Jordan for their hometown date, Aaron was noticeably absent. Jordan explained that he and Aaron "don't really have that much of a relationship" and that he doesn't have hard feelings against him. It was rumored that things went sour when Aaron started dating actress Olivia Munn (they've since broken up), but she has stated that Aaron was already distant from his family when they started their courtship.

As for Jordan Rodgers, he was a quarterback at Vanderbilt University and has worked as a college football analyst for ESPN.

Q: Who is Diana Jenkins, the newest cast member on "The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills"? Also, who was she married to who was so wealthy? — F.L.

A: Born Sanela Dijana Catic, the newest Bravo housewife is of Bosnian descent. She escaped Sarajevo in 1992 during the war, fled to Croatia and ultimately emigrated to London. In 1999, she had the good fortune of meeting Roger Jenkins, who, according to Wikipedia, was the "highest paid banker" in the city of London during the mid-2000s while working for Barclays. The couple divorced in 2011, and she was said to have secured a $250 million divorce settlement.

Diana, 49, recently had a baby with her fiancé, 33-year-old singer-songwriter Asher Moore. She fits in nicely with the other full-lipped Beverly Hills housewives, but fortunately she also is generous with her wealth. She established a foundation in the memory of her brother who died in the Bosnian War, and she and actor Sean Penn started a relief organization for the people of Haiti after the devastating 2010 earthquake.

Q: Is there going to be a new season of the Martin Short/Steve Martin comedy? I forgot the name of it. It's on Hulu, and the first season was so great. — K.M.

A: "Only Murders in the Building" is the name of the mystery/comedy series with two of the funniest comedic actors to grace our screens in the past 50 years. Steve Martin and Martin Short play Charles Haden-Savage and Oliver Putnam, respectively, who, despite their bickering, solved the murder of one of their fellow tenants in Manhattan. The season finale left viewers with a cliffhanger that I won't spoil, but let's just say that the duo found themselves in a predicament with fellow crime-solver Mabel Mora, played by Selena Gomez. Season two begins Tuesday, June 28, on Hulu.

'Hip Hold' Is No Way to Stretch Your Dog

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: My wife likes to pick up our dog's hind legs to help him stretch; that is, she holds Cheerio by the hips so his hind legs are up off the ground while he stands on his front legs. I thought I read once that this is not good and strains the dog's joints or back or something. Your advice would be appreciated. — Zina J.

DEAR ZINA: The "hip hold" is a safety grip to pull your dog away from a fight with another dog. It's not a hold that should be forced or held for long periods. Stretching should be performed by owners when the dog's joints are not weight-bearing — meaning the dog should not be standing or leaning on the leg being stretched. Holding Cheerio up by his hindquarters and forcing him to brace on his front legs puts him at greater risk for injury. It can cause great pain in older dogs with arthritis.

If your wife would truly like to keep Cheerio's joints healthy and improve his overall circulation and well-being, there are some great safe stretching methods, and safe massage techniques as well. Here's a YouTube video of safe dog stretching exercises by a veterinary therapist: tinyurl.com/4ay7sfjc. Notice that at no point does the therapist stretch a joint that the dog is standing on — they are all unweighted stretches.

Dogs also stretch themselves frequently, especially when getting up after a long nap. Don't try to assist their natural stretching — dogs stretch in a way that's comfortable for them. Therapeutic stretching and massage are designed to help facilitate a dog's natural movement without placing stress on the joints.

If you have more questions about your dog's mobility, talk with the vet at his next checkup.

MORE SUN FUN

Fresh (R) — Some of us know the horrors of modern dating all too well, like Noa, who gets increasingly frustrated with online dating after awful experiences. Noa (Daisy Edgar-Jones) then meets a doctor named Steve (Sebastian Stan) at a grocery store and agrees to go out with him. Steve seems funny and different, which Noa finds refreshing. Steve decides to surprise Noa with a getaway to Cottage Grove for a weekend, but when Steve picks Noa up, she realizes that a trip to Cottage Grove would be nowhere in sight for her as Steve's motives quickly turn sinister. "Fresh" can be described as a quirky romantic thriller; the two genres blend for an entertainingly unique experience. Bonus points for the cool title credits, which come in around the 30-minute timestamp. (Hulu)

The Bombardment (TV-MA) — During World War II, a Danish boy named Henry wanders upon a taxi mistakenly targeted by a British fighter plane, a car containing four dead bodies. The sight scars Henry so deeply he becomes mute. To help Henry overcome his condition, he's sent to Copenhagen, where he meets Eva and Rigmor, two schoolgirls who help pull him out of his shell. The film's point of view then shifts to the relationship between Teresa, a nun at the school, and Frederik, a Gestapo officer who experiences inner conflict about morality. The rest of the film is spent in gut-wrenching action as a British bombing mission accidentally targets their school. This Danish film is not an easy watch, but brilliant in the way it showcases the effects of war. (Netflix)

West Side Story (PG-13) — Most know the story of Tony and Maria, the Jets and the Sharks, a legendary story in musical theater/film. The first film adaptation, made in 1961, starred only one Latina actor, Rita Moreno, in a story specifically about Puerto Ricans, causing it to miss out on telling an authentic story. So, a new adaptation was put into works to tell the classic musical with a much more modern lens. While Steven Spielberg's colorful direction engages viewers from the start, the lead women in the cast truly make the film stand out: Breakout star Rachel Zegler, with vocal cords of gold, portrays the captivating Maria, while Ariana DeBose stuns in Moreno's previous role, Anita, for which DeBose won Best Supporting Actress at the Oscars. Opening lead — three of diamonds.

It is said that in war every new weapon gives rise to a counterweapon. In much the same way, many bidding and play conventions can frequently be turned against their users.

Consider this deal where the bidding went as shown. South's two-spade bid was not based on the normal complement of at least 17 high-card points usually needed for a jump-shift response, but his bid was quite reasonable, considering the enormous trick-taking power of his spades. South knew he was on the verge of a slam the moment his partner opened the bidding, and he wanted the two of them to be on the same page.

East's subsequent double of six spades was conventional. In the given sequence, it asked West to lead the first suit bid by dummy — namely, hearts.

The significance of the double was not lost on North, who realized that a heart lead through the A-Q could prove fatal. So, he wisely ran to six notrump, a contract that proved unbeatable against any opening lead. He lost a club trick, but that was all.

East was in the unfortunate position where, if he passed six spades, West would probably lead a diamond, while if he doubled, he risked chasing the opponents into six notrump. On the whole, East was right to double, since there was no assurance that either North or South would budge after the double. In the actual case, East was a goner either way.

What Is The Optimal Blood Pressure?

DEAR DR. ROACH: I read that high blood pressure is 140/90, but I thought 120/70 was optimal. Has the standard number increased? -- D.M.I.

ANSWER: The "pressure" in "blood pressure" is given in millimeters of mercury. It is a measurement of the pressure inside large blood vessels, first at its peak during the left ventricle squeezing (the systolic, or top number) and then at its lowest, right before the ventricle starts squeezing again (diastolic, or bottom number). Both of these numbers are important, and they provide important information about the physiology of the heart and blood vessels, as well as provide prognostic information about the risk of heart attack and stroke.

In general, for healthy people, the higher the numbers, the greater the risk. The optimum blood pressure for health is about 110/70, but there are some people with lower values who are also very healthy and who have very low risk for vascular disease.

Risk for heart disease starts to go up more significantly at about 140/90, but above a systolic number of 160, the risk goes up even more dramatically. The trend in blood pressure control over recent years has been toward making the blood pressure closer to the optimum, as long as treatment is well-tolerated. Having a slightly lower risk of heart attack may not be worth it to a person who has significant symptoms from blood pressure medicines.

Fortunately, blood pressure is much easier to control than it used to be with better medications and with non-drug treatments, such as stress reduction, healthy diet, regular moderate exercise and, for some people, salt restriction.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am an 89-year-old man who has been taking tamsulosin (Flomax), 0.4 mg, for many years. I take it after supper in the evening. I get up at night three or four times to urinate. Would it be better to take it after lunch? I would be happy if I could reduce the number of times I get up to maybe only once or twice. -- P.J.S.

ANSWER: Tamsulosin is in the class of alpha blockers, and they relax smooth muscle, a special type of muscle found in the prostate and in blood vessels (among other places). Relaxing the smooth muscle in the prostate makes the urethra, the tube that carries the urine from the bladder and through the prostate, larger. As a result, men can empty their bladders more easily.

However, even though tamsulosin is better at relaxing smooth muscle in the prostate than in blood vessels, some men will get lightheaded upon standing when using it. This occurs especially on the first dose, and over time most men no longer have trouble. It is usually dosed at nighttime so that the lightheadedness on standing is minimized. You can take it at any time of the day (a half-hour after eating is recommended, at the same meal of the day), but I doubt it will work much better.

Many experts will use 0.8 mg in men who haven't had an ideal response and who do not have lightheadedness. I'd ask your doctor whether an increased dose might be better. Before considering another drug, be sure you avoid too many liquids at night, especially alcohol, and try voiding your bladder twice before bed to make sure it is as empty as possible.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.

Campfire Swiss Steak

This main dish is so easy, you'll want to camp out under the stars more often. And for those of you who consider sleeping in a motel as "roughing it," you can always make it at home.

- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 4 (4-ounce) lean minute or cube steaks
- 1 1/2 cups shredded carrots
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped green bell pepper
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 2 cups chopped raw potatoes
- 1 cup (one 8-ounce can) tomato sauce
- 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
- 1/8 teaspoon black pepper

1. Cut four (18-inch) pieces of double thickness, heavy-duty aluminum foil. Lightly spray each piece with butter-flavored cooking spray. Place flour in flat saucer. Coat steaks on both sides with flour. Place each steak on piece of prepared foil.

2. In medium bowl, combine carrots, onion, green pepper, celery and potatoes. Evenly place about 1 1/2 cups vegetable mixture over each steak. In small bowl, combine tomato sauce, parsley and black pepper. Spoon about 1/4 cup of sauce mixture evenly over top of each. Wrap securely.

3. Bake on grill or over campfire coals for 30 to 40 minutes, turning every 10 minutes to prevent burning. Or, arrange packets on a baking sheet and bake in an oven preheated to 350 F for 1 hour. Serves 4.

• Each serving equals: 278 calories, 6g fat, 28g protein, 28g carb., 460mg sodium, 3g fiber; Diabetic Exchanges: 3 Meat, 2 Vegetable, 1 Starch.

1. Black Sabbath, in 1970. The song was on the b-side of the "Paranoid" single. The idea for the song came from the Gandalf character in "The Lord of the Rings" novel.
2. Parrotheads are Jimmy Buffet fans who go to his concerts wearing parrot hats, flipflops and Hawaiian shirts. Buffet has made his millions in multiple ways: music, books and a restaurant chain.
3. Dan Hill, in 1977. Hill said in an interview that the song was from a real-life experience: The girl loved someone else.
4. The Shirelles, in 1962.

Medal Of Honor Recipient William R. Caddy Remembered

tion, 26th Marines, in the newly formed Fifth Marine Division. Caddy's unit left San Diego for Hawaii on July 22, 1944 for more intensive training. In late January 1945, Caddy and his comrades boarded ships for a secret campaign – Operation Detachment – to capture the Japanese island of Iwo Jima and its three airfields that American military leaders believed could serve as a staging area for U.S. warplanes to raid the Japanese mainland.

"The 26th Marines of the Fifth Marine Division were ordered into their assault landing craft late in the day on February 19, 1945," said Connolly.

Over the next few weeks, Caddy and his unit were met with intense opposition from the Japanese forces while trying to take control of the island.

On March 3, Caddy and two of his comrades were pinned down in a shell hole during a fierce battle as bullets flew over their heads. At one point, a grenade hurtled through the air and fell into the hole. Without hesitation, Caddy dove on top of the grenade as it exploded – his sacrifice saving the lives of his comrades.

Caddy was one of the 22 Marines and five sailors awarded the Medal of Honor by President Harry Truman for their heroic actions leading to victory during the Battle of Iwo Jima.

"The Medal of Honor is awarded in the name of Congress to a member of the military who distinguishes themselves by conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in the line of duty in action against an enemy of the United States," said Connolly. "Further, the deed performed must be one of personal bravery or self-sacrifice, so conspicuous, as to clearly distinguish the individual from their comrades. Incontestable proof of the act is necessary and each recommendation for the award is considered on the standard of extraordinary merit. The Medal of Honor is a symbol of those high ideals, and it represents the nation's expression of gratitude and recognition to those individuals, whose uncommon valor sets them apart from all the others."

Caddy's Medal of Honor citation was read by retired Quincy Veterans Services Director George Nicholson.

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty while serving as a rifleman with Company 1, Third Battalion, 26th Marines, Fifth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces during the seizure of Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, 3 March 1945. Consistently aggressive, Private First Class Caddy boldly defied shattering Japanese machine-gun and small arms fire to move forward with his platoon leader and another marine during a determined advance of his company through an isolated sector and, gaining the comparative safety of a shell hole, took temporary cover with his comrades," read Nicholson.

"Immediately pinned down by deadly sniper fire from a well-concealed position, he made several unsuccessful attempts to again move forward and then, joined by his platoon leader, engaged the enemy in a fierce exchange of hand grenades until a Japanese grenade fell in the shell hole."

Nicholson continued, "Fearlessly disregarding all personal danger, Private First Class Caddy instantly threw himself upon the deadly missile, absorbing the exploding charge in his own body and protecting the others from serious injury. Stouthearted and indomitable, he unhesitatingly yielded his own life that his fellow Marines might carry on the relentless battle against a fanatic enemy. His dauntless courage and valiant spirit of self-sacrifice in the face of certain death reflect the highest credit upon PFC Caddy and upon the U.S. Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his comrades."

Nicolson read a prayer written by former Quincy Union Congregational Church Pastor John Swanson noting that Caddy was 19 when he died.

"It's so easy for us to forget that William and the legions of Williams were so very, very young," he said. "In an age today when true manhood is often denigrated or worse, mocked, we remember William Caddy as an example of what it is to be a man."

Connolly said that Caddy Memorial Park was dedicated in October 1961 and a ceremony paying tribute to Caddy has been held annually since 1962. Caddy's older sister, Beatrice "Bee" Caddy Bevans faithfully attended the ceremony each year until her passing several years ago.

According to Connolly, Bevans was a contributor to a book by author James Hallas, "Uncommon Valor on Iwo Jima," where she explained how her brother had left North Quincy High School, where he was a member of the varsity baseball team, before graduating to help his family still struggling from the depression.

Mayor Thomas Koch noted that the North Quincy High School atrium honors

some of its former students who distinguished themselves while serving in the military. In addition to Caddy, there are four other servicemen who have individual honors: Army Air Force Gen. Charles Sweeney who was involved in dropping both atomic bombs on Japan during WWII, including piloting the plane that attacked Nagasaki; Navy aviator Capt. Dick Stratton, Vietnam War POW; Medal of Honor recipient Marine Major Everett Pope, honored for leading a WWII assault against Japanese suicide attacks in Peleliu; and Airman Alan Brudno, who was held prisoner for 7½ years in Vietnam, the longest of any U.S. serviceman in history.

Koch related a quote from General George Patton that is displayed on the atrium's wall.

"It is wrong and foolish to mourn the lives of these men but rather, we should thank God that such men lived," he said, adding in his own words, "And we thank God for the life of William Caddy and all the veterans that keep us free."

Connolly also paid tribute to three other Quincy men who died fighting at Iwo Jima, Pvt. Malcolm McPherson, Pvt. John Jackson, and Pvt. John Koski.

"We remain committed to ensure that future generations remember our nation's war in the Pacific during World War II where uncommon valor became the legacy of our corps," Connolly said. "We honor all who have fallen in defense of our nation."

"The Singing Trooper," Dan Clark, performed patriotic songs including the national anthem. The ceremony concluded with the playing of Taps by Navy veteran Robert LaFleur.
